Busless, Trainless Plan To Solve Transit Problem

Alexis Tellis, Tiburon contractor-developer, today proposed a solution to Marin's intra-county transit needs which would require neither a major bus fleet nor a rail system.

Moreover, declared Tellis, it would reduce the dimensions of the energy crisis by cutting down the amount of gasoline consumed. And the only outlays would be for large quantities of plastic-enclosed identification cards and perhaps some additional police clerks to run background checks on drivers and riders.

In a letter to the county board of supervisors, Tellis declared:

"The transit system we need, including vehicles, trackage and operating personnel, is already here. Look at any street in Marin at any minute of the day and what do you see?

Council Election Tomorrow

Successors to three recalled councilmen in Corte Madera will be chosen tomorrow as the town's voters cast ballots in a special election.

There are 4,973 eligible voters. Voting will take place from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. in Holy Innocents Episcopal Church, Corte Madera Recreation Center, Neil Cummins School, San Clemente School and Granada School.

Candidates seeking the three seats are Jana G. Haehl, Howard C. Harvey, Albert A. Kostelic, Michael R. Marino, Lois L. Miner, John C. Reed, Philip O. Sasso, Joel A. Shawn, Larry P. Weingarth and George T. White.

They are seeking the seats of Mayor Holmes S. Norville and councilmen Edward W. Colthurst and Harold B. Wagstaff.

Norville and Wagstaff resigned their council seats following the recall election in September, rather than serve until their replacements were named. Colthurst continued to serve on the council.

Recall of the three councilmen was triggered by their support of the proposed Hahn regional shopping center and Madera del Presidio residential development. Town residents

At Least 21 Dead In Rome Hijacking

Terrorist Rampage Toll Could Hit 40

ROME (UPI) — In a bloody rampage from Rome to Athens, Arab guerrillas shot up a passenger lounge in the Rome airport today, bombed and burned out a waiting Pan Am jet with many passengers inside, herded hostages into another jet and executed one of them when it arrived in Greece.

At least 21 persons died in the carnage at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci International airport, with some officials predicting the toll could reach 40 dead. Many of the dead were believed to be Americans.

The hijackers shot and killed one of the Italian hostages, a policeman, after the plane landed in Athens to underline their demands for the release of two Arab "Black September" guerrillas imprisoned there for an earlier airport guerrilla attack.

One of the dead in Rome was an unidentified American who was cut down in the crossfire of a shootout on the runway, airport officials said, and Pan American officials said there were "a lot" of Americans aboard the Pan Am plane which the guerrillas bombed and burned out.

It was one of the bloodiest attacks ever launched by Arab guerrillas. Twenty-six persons were killed in the assault on Tel Aviv's Lod airport on May 30, 1972, and 17 persons killed in the Sept. 5, 1972 attack on the Israeli quarters in Olympic village.

The Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), the overall umbrella of the Palestinian guerrilla groups, immediately condemned the action, coming almost on the eve of the Geneva conference between Israelis and Arabs to try to bring peace to the Middle East after 25 years.

The hijacked jet, a twinengine West German Lufthansa Boeing 737, landed at Athens International airport at 5:05 p.m. (10:05 a.m. EST) and parked about three-quarters of a mile from the terminal.

Apparently there were a number of wounded persons aboard the hijacked jet and the Arabs reportedly asked for ambulances to remove them.

Simon Assures Farmers They'll Get All The Fuel They Require

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William E. Simon, the nation's energy chief, reassured farmers today they need have no worry that they will get all the gasoline, propane and fuel oil they need to harvest or process their crops.

"If the farmers, dairymen, livestock raisers and commercial fishermen are going to provide the increased production they have been asked to produce next year, they must get the fuel they need to do the job," Simon said.

While fuel allocations already announced contain provisions that agriculture would get priority treatment, Simon issued the new assurance in a prepared speech to an agricultural outlook conference sponsored by the Agriculture Department.

On another subject, Simon said it would be "pure speculation" to predict how high the cost of gasoline will go in this country. There have been some forecasts that it will reach $1 or more a gallon in a few months.

Simon said in an interview this morning on the NBC-TV Today Show that it was impossible at this time to make a forecast with any degree of accuracy because of such variables as crude oil prices and consumer demand.

"To speculate, and it would be pure speculation, on where the market price is going to be for gasoline next year is difficult because there are just too many things that could happen between now and then," Simon said.

On farm needs, Simon said: "There is no question that farmers will have to contribute to energy conservation, just like other sectors of the economy. However, I believe that 'farm needs' are really national needs."

Simon said he would decide this week whether to recommend to President Nixon that gasoline rationing be instituted.

Simon, like the President, has made it clear he does not like the idea of direct rationing of gasoline to consumers.

Kaiser Hospital Strike Is Ended

Conditions were almost back to normal at the Kaiser Hospital in San Rafael today, following settlement of an 11-day strike by the Hospital and Institutional Workers union at all Kaiser medical facilities in Northern California.

Thomas P. DeMartino, administrator of the San Rafael hospital, said, "we have very little catching up to do," and that the hospital's number of patients is comparatively low today.

The 5,000-member union local yesterday approved a new contract calling for a 6.2 per cent pay raise and additional fringe benefits, by a vote of 2,093 to 258. A few remaining issues will be submitted to arbitration, according to Felix Smith, union business agent. The contract is retroactive to Oct. 28, when the old contract expired.

During the strike, physicians, nurses and other staff performed the housekeeping chores normally handled by the members of Local 250. Some routine services such as physical examinations were curtailed; the San Rafael Hospital's phone traffic was unusually heavy today as health plan members made new appointments.

Though the Kaiser employees were back at work, Marin County continued to feel the impact of the butchers' and carpenters' labor disputes.

Officials of the carpenters' union said they were obeying court orders banning strike activities — but anonymous rank-and-file members were picketing building projects and sending letters to members of other unions, asking them to seek central labor council action to shut down all Northern California construction.

The carpenters are refusing to work because the federal Construction Industry Stabilization Committee disapproved a raise the carpenters were scheduled to get under a contract ratified before the federal wage-price freeze was enacted.

Kaiser spokesman DeMartino said carpenters today were picketing the construction of an addition to the hospital in San Rafael, but other craftsmen were on the job. The work temporarily was halted completely last week when hospital workers picketed the construction project.

All work has halted on the courthouse Square and Firemen's Fund building projects in San Rafael and on the Novato Bypass freeway construction. However, Johnny Ribiero Builders, putting up hundreds of apartments in Ignacio, reported full crews on the job today.

A spokesman for striking Northern California butchers said marathon talks took place over the weekend in Washington, D.C., between butchers union and Food Employers Council representatives as the strike entered its third week.

The butchers spokesman said federal mediators have imposed a news blackout on the negotiations, which he said began Friday afternoon and continued through 9 a.m. eastern time today. He said the talks

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Cardinal Cicognani Dies At 90

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Cardinal Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, World War II apostolic delegate to the United States, died today at the age of 90, the Vatican said.

Cicognani

Cicognani, who had been bedridden in recent days in his Vatican apartment, died of "cardiac insufficiency," the announcement said.

The death reduced the College of Cardinals to 135 but did not affect the total of 113 eligible to vote on selection of the next Pope. Pope Paul VI has limited eligibility to cardinals under the age of 80.

The Vatican said the pontiff paid a visit to the ailing cardinal Saturday in his apartment on the first floor of the Apostolic Palace, where the Pope has an apartment on the third floor.

Honeymoon Ends

"It certainly looks jolly cold outside," said the coatless cavalry captain to his royal wife as their commercial flight from Antigua landed at Heathrow Airport.

Rebel Advance

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Khmer Rouge insurgents today drove government forces from a position 10 miles from here in the second day of attacks along the capital's southeastern defenses, the Cambodian command said.

A military source said many Cambodian soldiers were missing after government forces abandoned Kien Svay and fled 200 yards north to the Mekong River. Survivors were rescued from there by navy gunboats.

In Saigon, the United States asked the International Commission of Control and Supervision to investigate a Communist attack Saturday on an unarmed helicopter in which an American officer and a South Vietnamese crew member were killed.

It was the first American protest to the four-nation commission since it was established by the January cease-fire.

Nixon Gaining

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The latest Gallup Poll indicates the percentage of Americans who believe President Nixon should be forced out of office has dropped slightly after rising steadily since June.

Thirty-five per cent of those questioned in a Nov. 30-Dec. 3 survey said the President should be impeached and compelled to leave office.

In both surveys a majority of Americans said they opposed impeaching Nixon. And both polls also showed the majority of the public disapproving of the way Nixon is handling the presidency.

The latest survey came after Nixon began his "Operation Candor," in which he made a number of public appearances across the country, but before he made public his income tax returns Dec. 9.

British Crisis

LONDON (UPI) — The cabinet today approved a pre-Christmas belt-tightening package that would mean higher taxes, pay cuts, part-time working and mounting unemployment for crisis-plagued Britons.

Government sources said the cabinet approved special emergency budget measures and Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber would announce them to Parliament later today.

The London Evening Standard said the measures — expected to be among the toughest Britain has known in peacetime — would place the country on a "siege economy."

Greeks Freed

ATHENS (UPI) — The Greek government today released the last of 300 persons detained during last month's bloody anti-government rebellion, but students charged the new regime had begun a new program of arrests.

Large concentrations of police, armored cars and portable tear-gas canister launchers were spotted throughout the capital, witnesses reported.

Dairy Tape Said Obtained In Nader Suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lawyer for Ralph Nader says he has obtained a tape of President Nixon's controversial March 23, 1971, meeting with dairy leaders, which could be important in Nader's suit charging the administration increased milk supports in exchange for huge campaign gifts.

The attorney, William O. Dobrovir, said over the weekend he also has obtained by subpoena the diaries for Nixon's former top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, from mid-1970 until after the 1972 election.

Dobrovir has been gathering evidence in the suit, which is one of several legal actions aimed at the dairy industry involving Republican campaign contributions now believed to total at least $527,500.

The Senate Watergate committee has authorized a general subpoena for the administration's dairy records and is expected to focus part of its January hearings on campaign financing on the industry. So far, no subpoenas have been served by the committee.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski has assigned two lawyers to the dairy matter. The Justice Department is pursuing a civil antitrust suit against Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI), headquartered in San Antonio, Tex., and one of three major milk cooperatives.

The controversy involves these allegations:

Jake Jacobson, AMPI attorney and White House aide in the Johnson administration, testified in a deposition in November he gave $100,000 in cash in August, 1969, to Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's fundraiser and private lawyer.

Former Rep. Pat Hillings, R-Calif., who succeeded Nixon as a House member before becoming an AMPI lawyer, wrote Nixon in December 1970: "We are now working with Tom Evans and Herb Kalmbach in setting up appropriate channels for AMPI to contribute $2 million to your re-election."

Hillings also asked that dairy import quotas be tightened. The administration revised the quotas two weeks later, Nader charged, "according to the wishes of the industry."

Former Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin set the support price for milk for the year beginning April 1, 1970, at $4.66 a hundredweight, and on March 12, 1971, "after careful review," refused to raise it any further.

Nixon met on March 23, 1971, with executives from AMPI, Mid America Dairies and Dairymen Inc., the three major dairy co-ops.

Hardin announced on March 25, 1971, an increase in the price support to $4.93.

The three co-ops, through their political affiliates, gave at least $427,500 in reported contributions to various Nixon reelection committees between March 22, 1971, and Election Day.

Wallace Gives Daughter Away

A pink and white tent was set up at the executive mansion for 8,000 guests to attend the wedding reception.

The bride, 23, was escorted down the aisle at St. James Methodist Church by her brother, George Jr. The governor, who remains paralyzed in both legs as a result of a 1972 assassination attempt, was seated in his wheelchair near the altar.

Kissinger Says Israelis Will Attend Peace Talks

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said today Israel will attend the Middle East peace conference in Geneva and that disengagement of forces on the Suez front will top the agenda.

"There is full agreement about the procedures of the opening of the conference," Kissinger told newsmen at Lod International Airport after 10 hours of talks with the Israeli leaders over the past day and a half.

"The opening of the conference should deal with the separation of forces," he said. "The United States will maintain the closest contact with Israel through the negotiations."

The comment about U.S.-Israeli contacts during the peace conference was an apparent reference to Israeli anxieties about the United Nations' role at the talks, due to open Friday.

Kissinger described his sessions with Prime Minister Golda Meir and other Israeli leaders as "very warm, very constructive, very full."

Scandal Termed Teapot Tempest

He also expressed the view that Nixon's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods, could have mistakenly caused the controversial 18-minute gap in the June 20 tape of a conversation between President Nixon and his former chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

"I've known Rose Mary Woods for years and I don't think she's mechanical," he said. "I'm sure she could have made a mistake and so could I."

Edward Nixon, 43, who lives in Linwood, Wash., a suburb of Seattle, and is a consultant in the field of pollution, attended the White House worship service yesterday after spending the night in the executive mansion.

Asked about Watergate, he told reporters: "I think it's a tempest in the teapot. There are a lot of things that should not have been done in every administration in this country. This administration is no exception."

As to the President's tapes, he said: "The tapes were to make a record for history," he added. "That's what they were intended for ... not to be pulled apart, analyzed and used to destroy a man who has the best interest of the country at heart."

Another White House guest was Nixon's son-in-law, David Eisenhower, who said that he thought that the 18-minute gap "was damaging" and who criticized the news media coverage of bribery charges against former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew as "a disgrace."

"In a way the press was vindicated..," he said, "but it doesn't excuse the manner in which he was handled."

In other developments:

Former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson said that, to regain confidence of the public, President Nixon should do more than release information "bit by bit" and should ship "a moving van" full of all relevant documents to federal court. He appeared on a radio-television program with Sen. Richard S. Schweicker, R-Pa., for broadcast on Pennsylvania stations.

White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren termed "false" any suggestion the President might use the planned gift of his San Clemente, Calif., home to the government to obtain a short term tax deduction. "The idea that the President would utilize the gift of the home to the American people for a short term tax benefit completely misses the spirit of the gift," Warren said. The President has said the home will be donated after he and Mrs. Nixon are dead. The New York Times said the gift could result in a deduction between $390,000 and $870,000 spread over six years.

Continuing our discussion of cod liver oil, which comes in tasteless capsules: Most pediatricians prescribe it for babies and growing children because it provides vitamin D to help teeth and bones develop properly. And as we reach adulthood, especially if we don't get enough sunlight, cod liver oil is recommended in order to assure that our bodies make use of the minerals in our diet.

It provides other benefits too. But since we're trying to be simple, suffice it to say that few foods contain a significant amount of vitamin D. A small portion of cod liver oil, though, as indicated on the bottle, supplies a recommended daily amount according to nutritionists. A word of caution: It's wise to make certain that genuine, natural fish liver oil is what you take, rather than a synthetic substitute. (Next, something about vitamin C.)

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Cardinal Cicognani Dies At 90

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Cardinal Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, World War II apostolic delegate to the United States, died today at the age of 90, the Vatican said.

Cicognani

Cicognani, who had been bedridden in recent days in his Vatican apartment, died of "cardiac insufficiency," the announcement said.

The death reduced the College of Cardinals to 135 but did not affect the total of 113 eligible to vote on selection of the next Pope. Pope Paul VI has limited eligibility to cardinals under the age of 80.

The Vatican said the pontiff paid a visit to the ailing cardinal Saturday in his apartment on the first floor of the Apostolic Palace, where the Pope has an apartment on the third floor.

Honeymoon Ends

"It certainly looks jolly cold outside," said the coatless cavalry captain to his royal wife as their commercial flight from Antigua landed at Heathrow Airport.

Rebel Advance

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Khmer Rouge insurgents today drove government forces from a position 10 miles from here in the second day of attacks along the capital's southeastern defenses, the Cambodian command said.

A military source said many Cambodian soldiers were missing after government forces abandoned Kien Svay and fled 200 yards north to the Mekong River. Survivors were rescued from there by navy gunboats.

In Saigon, the United States asked the International Commission of Control and Supervision to investigate a Communist attack Saturday on an unarmed helicopter in which an American officer and a South Vietnamese crew member were killed.

It was the first American protest to the four-nation commission since it was established by the January cease-fire.

Nixon Gaining

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The latest Gallup Poll indicates the percentage of Americans who believe President Nixon should be forced out of office has dropped slightly after rising steadily since June.

Thirty-five per cent of those questioned in a Nov. 30-Dec. 3 survey said the President should be impeached and compelled to leave office.

In both surveys a majority of Americans said they opposed impeaching Nixon. And both polls also showed the majority of the public disapproving of the way Nixon is handling the presidency.

The latest survey came after Nixon began his "Operation Candor," in which he made a number of public appearances across the country, but before he made public his income tax returns Dec. 9.

British Crisis

LONDON (UPI) — The cabinet today approved a pre-Christmas belt-tightening package that would mean higher taxes, pay cuts, part-time working and mounting unemployment for crisis-plagued Britons.

Government sources said the cabinet approved special emergency budget measures and Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber would announce them to Parliament later today.

The London Evening Standard said the measures — expected to be among the toughest Britain has known in peacetime — would place the country on a "siege economy."

Greeks Freed

ATHENS (UPI) — The Greek government today released the last of 300 persons detained during last month's bloody anti-government rebellion, but students charged the new regime had begun a new program of arrests.

Large concentrations of police, armored cars and portable tear-gas canister launchers were spotted throughout the capital, witnesses reported.

Dairy Tape Said Obtained In Nader Suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lawyer for Ralph Nader says he has obtained a tape of President Nixon's controversial March 23, 1971, meeting with dairy leaders, which could be important in Nader's suit charging the administration increased milk supports in exchange for huge campaign gifts.

The attorney, William O. Dobrovir, said over the weekend he also has obtained by subpoena the diaries for Nixon's former top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, from mid-1970 until after the 1972 election.

Dobrovir has been gathering evidence in the suit, which is one of several legal actions aimed at the dairy industry involving Republican campaign contributions now believed to total at least $527,500.

The Senate Watergate committee has authorized a general subpoena for the administration's dairy records and is expected to focus part of its January hearings on campaign financing on the industry. So far, no subpoenas have been served by the committee.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski has assigned two lawyers to the dairy matter. The Justice Department is pursuing a civil antitrust suit against Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI), headquartered in San Antonio, Tex., and one of three major milk cooperatives.

The controversy involves these allegations:

Jake Jacobson, AMPI attorney and White House aide in the Johnson administration, testified in a deposition in November he gave $100,000 in cash in August, 1969, to Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's fundraiser and private lawyer.

Former Rep. Pat Hillings, R-Calif., who succeeded Nixon as a House member before becoming an AMPI lawyer, wrote Nixon in December 1970: "We are now working with Tom Evans and Herb Kalmbach in setting up appropriate channels for AMPI to contribute $2 million to your re-election."

Hillings also asked that dairy import quotas be tightened. The administration revised the quotas two weeks later, Nader charged, "according to the wishes of the industry."

Former Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin set the support price for milk for the year beginning April 1, 1970, at $4.66 a hundredweight, and on March 12, 1971, "after careful review," refused to raise it any further.

Nixon met on March 23, 1971, with executives from AMPI, Mid America Dairies and Dairymen Inc., the three major dairy co-ops.

Hardin announced on March 25, 1971, an increase in the price support to $4.93.

The three co-ops, through their political affiliates, gave at least $427,500 in reported contributions to various Nixon reelection committees between March 22, 1971, and Election Day.

Wallace Gives Daughter Away

A pink and white tent was set up at the executive mansion for 8,000 guests to attend the wedding reception.

The bride, 23, was escorted down the aisle at St. James Methodist Church by her brother, George Jr. The governor, who remains paralyzed in both legs as a result of a 1972 assassination attempt, was seated in his wheelchair near the altar.

Kissinger Says Israelis Will Attend Peace Talks

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said today Israel will attend the Middle East peace conference in Geneva and that disengagement of forces on the Suez front will top the agenda.

"There is full agreement about the procedures of the opening of the conference," Kissinger told newsmen at Lod International Airport after 10 hours of talks with the Israeli leaders over the past day and a half.

"The opening of the conference should deal with the separation of forces," he said. "The United States will maintain the closest contact with Israel through the negotiations."

The comment about U.S.-Israeli contacts during the peace conference was an apparent reference to Israeli anxieties about the United Nations' role at the talks, due to open Friday.

Scandal Termed Teapot Tempest

He also expressed the view that Nixon's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods, could have mistakenly caused the controversial 18-minute gap in the June 20 tape of a conversation between President Nixon and his former chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

"I've known Rose Mary Woods for years and I don't think she's mechanical," he said. "I'm sure she could have made a mistake and so could I."

Edward Nixon, 43, who lives in Linwood, Wash., a suburb of Seattle, and is a consultant in the field of pollution, attended the White House worship service yesterday after spending the night in the executive mansion.

Asked about Watergate, he told reporters: "I think it's a tempest in the teapot. There are a lot of things that should not have been done in every administration in this country. This administration is no exception."

As to the President's tapes, he said: "The tapes were to make a record for history," he added. "That's what they were intended for ... not to be pulled apart, analyzed and used to destroy a man who has the best interest of the country at heart."

Another White House guest was Nixon's son-in-law, David Eisenhower, who said that he thought that the 18-minute gap "was damaging" and who criticized the news media coverage of bribery charges against former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew as "a disgrace."

"In a way the press was vindicated..," he said, "but it doesn't excuse the manner in which he was handled."

In other developments:

Former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson said that, to regain confidence of the public, President Nixon should do more than release information "bit by bit" and should ship "a moving van" full of all relevant documents to federal court. He appeared on a radio-television program with Sen. Richard S. Schweicker, R-Pa., for broadcast on Pennsylvania stations.

White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren termed "false" any suggestion the President might use the planned gift of his San Clemente, Calif., home to the government to obtain a short term tax deduction. "The idea that the President would utilize the gift of the home to the American people for a short term tax benefit completely misses the spirit of the gift," Warren said. The President has said the home will be donated after he and Mrs. Nixon are dead. The New York Times said the gift could result in a deduction between $390,000 and $870,000 spread over six years.

Canning Industry Faces Energy Crisis

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's $1 million annual canning industry will be one of the hardest-hit, long range victims of the energy crisis, a top industry official said yesterday.

The pinch won't be felt immediately, according to James Bell, executive vice president of the Sacramento-based Canners League of California, but will be spread out over the next 10 years as the industry is forced to entirely alter its power supplies.

The consumer can also expect to fuel the bite with higher prices, Bell predicted.

California fruit and vegetable canners, who provide 35 per cent of those products consumed annually in the United States, have traditionally used natural gas for their boilers and other power needs.

But, Bell said, because of dwindling supplies canners are being cut back on how much they can use under federal guidelines.

Canners, under the guidelines, will have to reduce their natural gas use by 1 per cent in 1974, 6 per cent in 1974 and 14 per cent in 1976. And they have to show that these cuts are being filled with alternate oil fuels.

"There are indications that within 10 years we'll be curtailed on natural gas until we are 100 per cent users of other fuels for plant operations," Bell said in an interview.

In addition to capital outlays to make the hardware switch, canners will be faced with much higher prices for oil fuels as compared to natural gas, Bell declared.

"The current cost of oil fuel is about three times the cost of natural gas," he said.

The increased costs to canners, he added, will reach the consumer.

"It certainly has to be passed on somehow. Whether it's the next year or the year after, these capital outlays and higher fuel costs have to be part of the price structure."

California canners presently use an estimated 180 million therms (a therm is 100,000 British Thermal Units or BTUs) annually which Bell said was "a small percentage" of the total state use.

Canning is mostly for tomatoes in California but also includes peaches, fruit cocktails, pears, spinach, apricots, asparagus, olives, and even some grapes. The industry means an estimated $1 billion annually to California's economy.

New Satellite Put Into Space

The satellite launch was Saturday night and was visible to persons along the California coastline as a bright yellow flash.

NASA officials said the "Atmosphere Explorer" will study the upper atmosphere and the effects of "sun-spots" on weather and communications.

The 1,450-pound spacecraft will orbit the earth in a scientific "no-man's land" that is too high for aircraft observation and, until now, was too low for satellites.

Whooping Crane Ruling Is Asked

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger, an amateur ornithologist, has been asked to rule whether the use of Matagorda Island off the Texas coast as a practice bombing target is endangering the species.

The birds spend their winter in the adjacent Aransas National Wildlife Refuge and some also settle on the southwestern part of Matagorda after summering in Canada.

Schlesinger is examining a report from Interior Department official Andrew Sansom, who has concluded that the birds are being disturbed and threatened by plane overflights, bombing, low-level strafing and hunting by military personnel and civilians on the island.

Bagley Leaves Firm To Run For Office

Assemblyman William T. Bagley today announced he has taken a leave of absence from his law firm to run for state controller, and will resign from it if elected.

The San Rafael Republican said the decision will cost him more than $30,000 net income for the next year alone.

Bagley founded the San Rafael firm, Bagley, Bianchi and Sheeks, more than a decade ago, and is its senior partner.

He said the firm did "absolutely no business involving the state," but the decision "assures that there will not even be the possiblity of unfounded accusations by political opponents."

Calling on other candidates for statewide office to cut their ties with the law firms, insurance firms and other professions posing possible conflicts of interest, Bagley said doing so "would go a long way to answering the public cry for confidence in their candidates."

The veteran assemblyman added that "in these times people in public service can no longer afford the luxury of business or politics as usual."

Sunshine Replaces The Rain

Rainclouds early today dropped up to .4 of an inch on some areas of Marin and Southern Sonoma County, then made way for sunshine.

Federal weather forecasters predicted more sun for tomorrow, with night and morning fog and low clouds.

Despite the fact that rainfall this winter is more than twice the average rainfall to date, December has been a drier than average month. The first 17 days of December normally chalk up 3.64 inches of rain; so far this month, San Rafael has had only 2.36 inches.

Rains in October and last month were far above normal, bringing the season total to date to 26.11 inches, compared to an average of 9.76 inches.

Last year's season total to date was 21.41 inches.

Tamalpais Valley logged the heaviest precipitation overnight, with .4 of an inch; Sausalito had .35 of an inch, Belvedere had .33 of an inch, Bolinas had .31 of an inch, San Rafael, .35 of an inch, and Novato had .05 of an inch, all during the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. became divided over those projects as they related to the town's future and growth.

The shopping center plan for development on 45 acres of land east of Highway 101 is stalled as the Army Corps of Engineers considers a permit to fill portions of the site. A decision on the permit is expected early next year.

New councilmen selected Tuesday will serve only until municipal elections March 5 as the three recalled councilmens' seats were up for election next spring.

Filing deadline for that election is Dec. 27 and all candidates in Tuesday's election except Marino, Reed and White have taken out nomination papers for the spring election.

would start again tonight. "They're exhausted," he said.

A cost-of-living pay increase for the butchers was said to be the only disputed point remaining. "It's really the only big hang-up now," the butchers spokesman said. "We want an open-ended formula and they want limits on it."

Meanwhile, according to United Press International reports, most of Safeway's 200 Northern California markets remained closed by the butchers' walkout, as well as Lucky stores.

Many Marin markets last week opened their meat counters after signing interim agreements with the butchers. Local chains reaching settlements with the union include Cala Foods, Big G and United Markets.

3 Arrested In Thievery At Store

Two San Francisco men and a sailor were arrested yesterday driving towards the Golden Gate Bridge after burglarizing a Sausalito store, according to police.

Sausalito police said that at about 2 a.m. yesterday a window was smashed setting off an alarm during a burglary at the Pegasus leather goods store on Princess Street, Sausalito.

When police arrived, a witness described a car seen in the area. Police and the California Highway Patrol later arrested on Highway 101: James Dominick Doriano, 27; Donald Scott Fraser, 23, and Robert Dennis Vigil, 20, a sailor stationed on the Niagara Falls.

Police said they found some leather goods in the car.

The three were taken to Marin County Jail and booked on suspicion of burglary. They were held in lieu of $3,500 bail each to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Number Of Bars Before Council In Mill Valley

A proposal to limit the number of bars allowed in Mill Valley will be heard by the city council tonight at 8 o'clock at city hall.

The suggestion from planning commission chairman Ivan S. Poutiatine comes after several months of deliberation by the commission and the council on how to control the spread of live entertainment at night spots.

Instead of controlling music, Poutiatine suggests new controls on the bars which produce the music, according to City Mgr. William H. Cunningham.

Also tonight the council will discuss whether to lease an old Exxon service station lot on Miller Avenue for public parking while the first phase of the Miller Avenue improvement project is going on and obstructing on-the-street parking.

Teachers To Ask For Revival Of Leaves Policy

Tamalpais High School District trustees — meeting at 8 p.m. today — will be asked to revive an old district policy under which trachers more frequently were granted year-long leaves.

The policy has changed in 1972 to group year-long leaves for travel and education with shorter leaves for teacher workshops.

Edward J. Neumeier, district administrative assistant, said grouping all leaves together in budgets has tended to reduce the number of longer leaves taken by teachers.

Frank Gold, president of the Tamalpais Federation of Teachers, district teachers union, will ask trustees to separate the shorter and longer leaves in next year's budget.

Garrison Seems Election Loser

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The official results of Saturday's election between incumbent District Attorney Jim Garrison and former federal prosecutor Harry Connick will not be known until tomorrow, but the unofficial count gives Connick a slim edge.

Connick, who led Garrison by only 1,825 votes out of 127,083 cast, refused to claim victory. He said today he just wants to relax and not worry about the outcome.

TRANSIT

Tellis went on to describe what he calls a system of random car pooling, which would minimize the dangers of assault, robbery or even minor annoyance by driver or rider without the formalities of ride assignment as in customary commute car pools.

"This is how it would work," he wrote:

"Maryanne Q. Marin decides to participate in the Marin Car Pooling Transit System. As a resident of Mill Valley, she goes to register at the Mill Valley Police Department. Her driver's license is Xeroxed onto a form on which she also answers cursory questions as to her health and previous life of non-crime. She is then issued a car pooling kit. The principal item is a 5-inch-by-7-inch vinyl sheet. The bottom half bears a number identifying her as a member of Marin Car Pooling. The upper half is blank. Her kit also contains a pen of 'liquid chalk' and an erasing sponge.

"Since Maryanne is on her way to San Rafael ... she decides to share her car. She writes 'San Raf' on the upper half of the vinyl with her liquid chalk and attaches the sheet to the inside of her side window.

"Just past the Tamalpais Theater, Maryanne sees an elderly gentleman standing on the corner holding to her view his own vinyl signaller. She knows that he needs transportation but also that he is from Marin and has registered to obtain his number. She slows, sees that he has written 'Corte Mad' on his signaller, and chooses to give him a lift. . .

"In accepting the ride from Maryanne, our rider, who introduces himself as Phillip Presidio, knows not only that Maryanne is a Marin Car Pooler, but that he will be covered by a policy of accident insurance should he be injured while riding in her car. When Phillip got his vinyl signaller he also purchased a book of 10-cent transit tickets and wrote his number on each. Phillip thanks Maryanne and hands her a ticket bearing his number which Maryanne will later use in a drawing for prizes, or perhaps trading stamp-type premiums or extra gas coupons. . .

"Perhaps a few weeks from now it will be Phillip who is driving and Maryanne who is waiting for a ride when he comes along."

Idea-man Tellis estimated that costs to set up such a system, including the car pooling kits, signs at designated pooling stops near freeway entrances, and an "umbrella" insurance policy to supplement individual car owners' policies, should be about $120,000 the first year. This compares with $750,000 spent in the past 12 months by the Marin Transit District for intracounty service by Golden Gate Transit buses, he noted.

Each person registering to become a member of the Marin Car Pooling Transit System would be subject to a background investigation by police, would have to have adequate insurance if a driver, and would have to be a Marin resident, Tellis explained.

This would provide protection for both rider and driver — eliminating, in Tellis's belief, the principal reason for all those empty seats going to Bolinas and Teaberry Lane (the latter, incidentally, being where Tellis lives).

HIJACK

Greek government free the two guerrillas jailed for an attack on Athens airport last August 5 where four persons died, airport sources said. The tower said one hostage was killed and the Arabs said that until their demands were met, they would kill one every 45 minutes and dump the body on the runway.

A Lufthansa spokesman in Cologne, Germany said the guerillas' first ultimatum expired at about 6 p.m. (12 p.m. EST).

"They thereupon shot and killed one of the Italian policemen held hostage on board, to underline their ultimatum," the spokesman said.

A commando confirmed the killing to the Athen's tower by saying, "I swear by my religion, my mother and my father."

"Tell the embassy the moment is critical," the pilot said.

The tower replied, "have a little patience. We are expecting an answer from the embassy and the authorities."

A Pan American spokesman in New York said because of bad weather the flight originated in Rome, rather than as scheduled in New York. The airline designated the flight leaving Rome for Beirut and Tehran as Flight 110.

Four Moroccan ministers of state were aboard the Pan Am plane at the time of the attack but their fate was not certain, the officials said.

One of the hostages aboard the Lufthansa jet was the radar checkpoint inspector who inadvertently sparked the massacre when he detected weapons in the hijacker's luggage at the Rome airport.

The Arabs grabbed the weapons and began shooting wildly inside the departure lounge. They also took several hostages. Airport officials said at least six of the hostages were members of the public security force at the airport.

Witnesses said gunfire broke out shortly before 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EST) sending people frantically scrambling from the building shouting, "It's a bomb! It's a bomb!"

The guerrillas then hurled a grenade or explosive device at the Pan Am 707, which was preparing for takeoff for Beirut with 57 passengers and nine crewmen. Flames raced through the plane, trapping many inside.

All of the guerrillas then converged on the empty Lufthansa plane which was preparing for a delayed takeoff on a Rome-Munich flight.

Garrison Seems Election Loser

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The official results of Saturday's election between incumbent District Attorney Jim Garrison and former federal prosecutor Harry Connick will not be known until tomorrow, but the unofficial count gives Connick a slim edge.

Connick, who led Garrison by only 1,825 votes out of 127,083 cast, refused to claim victory. He said today he just wants to relax and not worry about the outcome.

Tellis went on to describe what he calls a system of random car pooling, which would minimize the dangers of assault, robbery or even minor annoyance by driver or rider without the formalities of ride assignment as in customary commute car pools.

"This is how it would work," he wrote:

"Maryanne Q. Marin decides to participate in the Marin Car Pooling Transit System. As a resident of Mill Valley, she goes to register at the Mill Valley Police Department. Her driver's license is Xeroxed onto a form on which she also answers cursory questions as to her health and previous life of noncrime. She is then issued a car pooling kit. The principal item is a 5-inch-by-7-inch vinyl sheet. The bottom half bears a number identifying her as a member of Marin Car Pooling. The upper half is blank. Her kit also contains a pen of 'liquid chalk' and an erasing sponge.

"Since Maryanne is on her way to San Rafael . . . she decides to share her car. She writes 'San Raf' on the upper half of the vinyl with her liquid chalk and attaches the sheet to the inside of her side window.

"Just past the Tamalpais Theater, Maryanne sees an elderly gentleman standing on the corner holding to her view his own vinyl signaller. She knows that he needs transportation but also that he is from Marin and has registered to obtain his number. She slows, sees that he has written 'Corte Mad' on his signaller, and chooses to give him a lift. . .

"In accepting the ride from Maryanne, our rider, who introduces himself as Phillip Presidio, knows not only that Maryanne is a Marin Car Pooler, but that he will be covered by a policy of accident insurance should he be injured while riding in her car. When Phillip got his vinyl signaller he also purchased a book of 10-cent transit tickets and wrote his number on each. Phillip thanks Maryanne and hands her a ticket bearing his number which Maryanne will later use in a drawing for prizes, or perhaps trading stamp-type premiums or extra gas coupons. . .

"Perhaps a few weeks from now it will be Phillip who is driving and Maryanne who is waiting for a ride when he comes along."

Idea-man Tellis estimated that costs to set up such a system, including the car pooling kits, signs at designated pooling stops near freeway entrances, and an "umbrella" insurance policy to supplement individual car owners' policies, should be about $120,000 the first year. This compares with $750,000 spent in the past 12 months by the Marin Transit District for intracounty service by Golden Gate Transit buses, he noted.

Each person registering to become a member of the Marin Car Pooling Transit System would be subject to a background investigation by police, would have to have adequate insurance if a driver, and would have to be a Marin resident, Tellis explained.

This would provide protection for both rider and driver — eliminating, in Tellis's belief, the principal reason for all those empty seats going to Bolinas and Teaberry Lane (the latter, incidentally, being where Tellis lives).

HIJACK

Greek government free the two guerrillas jailed for an attack on Athens airport last August 5 where four persons died, airport sources said. The tower said one hostage was killed and the Arabs said that until their demands were met, they would kill one every 45 minutes and dump the body on the runway.

A Lufthansa spokesman in Cologne, Germany said the guerillas' first ultimatum expired at about 6 p.m. (12 p.m. EST).

"They thereupon shot and killed one of the Italian policemen held hostage on board, to underline their ultimatum," the spokesman said.

A commando confirmed the killing to the Athen's tower by saying, "I swear by my religion, my mother and my father."

"Tell the embassy the moment is critical," the pilot said.

The tower replied, "have a little patience. We are expecting an answer from the embassy and the authorities."

A Pan American spokesman in New York said because of bad weather the flight originated in Rome, rather than as scheduled in New York. The airline designated the flight leaving Rome for Beirut and Tehran as Flight 110.

Four Moroccan ministers of state were aboard the Pan Am plane at the time of the attack but their fate was not certain, the officials said.

One of the hostages aboard the Lufthansa jet was the radar checkpoint inspector who inadvertently sparked the massacre when he detected weapons in the hijacker's luggage at the Rome airport.

The Arabs grabbed the weapons and began shooting wildly inside the departure lounge. They also took several hostages. Airport officials said at least six of the hostages were members of the public security force at the airport.

Witnesses said gunfire broke out shortly before 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EST) sending people frantically scrambling from the building shouting, "It's a bomb! It's a bomb!"

The guerrillas then hurled a grenade or explosive device at the Pan Am 707, which was preparing for takeoff for Beirut with 57 passengers and nine crewmen. Flames raced through the plane, trapping many inside.

All of the guerrillas then converged on the empty Lufthansa plane which was preparing for a delayed takeoff on a Rome-Munich flight.

Safety Bureau Asks Taxicab Seat Belts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Did you ever try to buckle up in a taxi? You may be able to in the future.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) has been asked to require that taxicabs be equipped with safety belts which will remain accessible and operable for those who wish to use them.

"We are not suggesting that people ought to be required to buckle up in cabs," said Lowell Dodge, director of the Center for Auto Safety which filed the petition with the NHTSA during the weekend. "But, at a very minimum, people who want to use seat belts in cabs and other back seats should be able to without the hassles they face today."

Federal safety standards have required front and rear seat belts since the late 1960's and buzzers and an ignition interlock this year. But there is no law that prevents either owners or fleet operators from removing the belts or disconnecting the buzzers.

Dodge said the petition was prepared in response to numerous complaints, some of them from persons concerned about being thrown into the security barriers now installed between the front and rear seats to protect cab drivers in many cities.

Sixth graders will perform in "The Birthday of the King," seventh graders will present "Marcella's Christmas," and eighth graders will perform in "A Christmas Carol."

Lower Car Speed Shows A Saving In Mileage

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lowering your speed to 55 miles per hour can increase gasoline mileage 12.2 per cent and a minor auto tuneup can raise it another 9.6 per cent, says the California State Automobile Association.

In tests at the CSAA diagnostic center here, a drop in speed from 65 m.p.h. to 55 m.p.h. increased gasoline mileage 14.1 per cent on a 1971 Chevrolet Impala, 11.8 per cent on a 1973 Dodge Charger, 11.5 per cent on a 1972 Ford LTD and 11.3 per cent on a 1971 Volkswagen Superbeetle, for an average rise of 12.2 per cent.

The speed reduction tests were made in 22-minute drives in each car at constant speeds of 55 or 65 m.p.h.

The effect of the tuneup — adjusting the carburetor and setting the timing — tested on two 7.5-mile simulated commute trips. Gasoline mileage increased 14.7 per cent on the Dodge; 9.9 per cent on the VW and 6.4 per cent on the Ford.

The CSAA said the results are typical of the savings that can be obtained, although the individual results would vary.

Grand Jury Indicts Boyle For Murder

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI) — A Washington County grand jury Monday indicted former United Mine Workers (UMW) President W.A. (Tony) Boyle on three counts of murder in the 1969 Yablonski slayings.

District Attorney Jesse Costa said he would immediately begin extradition proceedings to have Boyle brought here to face trial. The grand jury deliberated about 30 minutes.

Boyle, whose case was one of 33 heard by the grand jury, was indicted in the murder of Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski, his wife and daughter in their Clarksville, Pa., home.

Boyle, now recuperating in a Washington, D. C., hospital after attempting to take his own life, recently lost an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court on his conviction earlier this year of illegally contributing union funds to political campaigns.

He was scheduled to appear at a federal removal hearing in Washington, Sept. 25, 1973, but instead ended up in a hospital. He had taken an overdose of barbiturates the day before in a suicide attempt, his physician said.

Eight other persons have been convicted or have confessed to their roles in the murder of the Yablonskis Dec. 31, 1969. Authorities say Boyle is the last link in the "murder chain" in the Yablonski killings.

It's the greatest little safety device you can get your hands on . . . especially late at night when you don't know what might be lurking outside. Genie opens the garage door by remote control, so there's no more getting out of your car to get into your garage. Genie turns on the light, so you don't have to take a lonely walk in the dark. And Genie closes the door and locks it, so you and your property are always protected. DOLLAR ESTATE CLEANUP

Safety Bureau Asks Taxicab Seat Belts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Did you ever try to buckle up in a taxi? You may be able to in the future.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) has been asked to require that taxicabs be equipped with safety belts which will remain accessible and operable for those who wish to use them.

"We are not suggesting that people ought to be required to buckle up in cabs," said Lowell Dodge, director of the Center for Auto Safety which filed the petition with the NHTSA during the weekend. "But, at a very minimum, people who want to use seat belts in cabs and other back seats should be able to without the hassles they face today."

Federal safety standards have required front and rear seat belts since the late 1960's and buzzers and an ignition interlock this year. But there is no law that prevents either owners or fleet operators from removing the belts or disconnecting the buzzers.

Dodge said the petition was prepared in response to numerous complaints, some of them from persons concerned about being thrown into the security barriers now installed between the front and rear seats to protect cab drivers in many cities.

Christmas Program Is Set Tomorrow

A Christmas program will be presented by the children of St. Patrick School in Larkspur tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish Hall.

Students in grades one through three will appear together in "Christmas Long Ago," and students in fourth and fifth grades will appear in "The Three Kings." Sixth graders will perform in "The Birthday of the King," seventh graders will present "Marcella's Christmas," and eighth graders will perform in "A Christmas Carol."

Stolen Art Work Worth $8,000

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An Italian Renaissance masterpiece print entitled "Three Stags" was stolen yesterday from the California Palace of the Legion of Honor.

The print was valued at $7,000.

The work was from a copper engraving created between 1500 and 1512 by Nicoletto Da Modena. It was part of an exhibition on "Early Italian Engravings from the National Gallery of Art."

Ferry Terminal Report On Agenda

Environmental impact report for the Larkspur Ferry Terminal will be reviewed by the Corte Madera Town Council today at 7:30 p.m. in town hall.

Councilmen will also consider a request by Jack Haehl, chairman of the citizens subcommittee on the circulation element of the proposed general plan, that a pedestrian-bicycle path be built over Highway 101.

Grand Jury Indicts Boyle For Murder

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI) — A Washington County grand jury Monday indicted former United Mine Workers (UMW) President W.A. (Tony) Boyle on three counts of murder in the 1969 Yablonski slayings.

District Attorney Jesse Costa said he would immediately begin extradition proceedings to have Boyle brought here to face trial. The grand jury deliberated about 30 minutes.

Boyle, whose case was one of 33 heard by the grand jury, was indicted in the murder of Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski, his wife and daughter in their Clarksville, Pa., home.

Boyle, now recuperating in a Washington, D. C., hospital after attempting to take his own life, recently lost an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court on his conviction earlier this year of illegally contributing union funds to political campaigns.

He was scheduled to appear at a federal removal hearing in Washington, Sept. 25, 1973, but instead ended up in a hospital. He had taken an overdose of barbiturates the day before in a suicide attempt, his physician said.

Eight other persons have been convicted or have confessed to their roles in the murder of the Yablonskis Dec. 31, 1969. Authorities say Boyle is the last link in the "murder chain" in the Yablonski killings.

Soviet Land

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union covers an area of 8,600,350 square miles in eastern Europe, and northern and central Asia.

Lower Car Speed Shows A Saving In Mileage

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lowering your speed to 55 miles per hour can increase gasoline mileage 12.2 per cent and a minor auto tuneup can raise it another 9.6 per cent, says the California State Automobile Association.

In tests at the CSAA diagnostic center here, a drop in speed from 65 m.p.h. to 55 m.p.h. increased gasoline mileage 14.1 per cent on a 1971 Chevrolet Impala, 11.8 per cent on a 1973 Dodge Charger, 11.5 per cent on a 1972 Ford LTD and 11.3 per cent on a 1971 Volkswagen Superbeetle, for an average rise of 12.2 per cent.

The speed reduction tests were made in 22-minute drives in each car at constant speeds of 55 or 65 m.p.h.

The effect of the tuneup — adjusting the carburetor and setting the timing — tested on two 7.5-mile simulated commute trips. Gasoline mileage increased 14.7 per cent on the Dodge; 9.9 per cent on the VW and 6.4 per cent on the Ford.

The CSAA said the results are typical of the savings that can be obtained, although the individual results would vary.

A Flight School

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — The site of the present Maxwell Air Force Base was first used as a flight school by the Wright Brothers. The base is located near Montgomery.

Misinformation Helps Kill Annexation Move

Independent-Journal
SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY
8 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1973 EDITORIAL PAGE

It appears that a majority protest has blocked the long-advocated annexation of the Country Club area to the City of San Rafael.

If the signatures on a protest petition filed with the city clerk on Friday are valid, it represents more than 50 per cent of assessed valuation in the area proposed for annexation. If that is the case, the move is dead, and a show-cause hearing in Marin Superior Court scheduled for Dec. 28 (postponed from Dec. 12) will be cancelled.

WE CONSIDER IT unfortunate that much misinformation has been circulated in the heated campaign for and against the Country Club annexation.

Opponents claimed that assessed valuation would be increased by the city, hiking tax bills. They were either badly informed or guilty of falsehood in such a claim, since the city has nothing to do with property assessments. That is the job of the county assessor's office. Whether or not a property is within city limits has no bearing.

Opponents also claimed that residents served by septic tanks would be forced to install sewers if annexed to the city. A little checking could have corrected this assumption. The lower Chula Vista area of the city is still without sewers because residents there blocked a proposed sewer assessment district about a decade ago.

OPPONENTS ALSO discounted the value of city fire protection, because the San Rafael Fire Department had not been called on for "first response" for a fire in the Country Club area in the last four years.

They then proposed that, to improve fire protection, a county services area be set up.

In only one case has Marin County set up a county services area for fire protection. That was done in upper Lucas Valley. Residents of the area then contracted with the Marinwood Community Services District for fire protection, and this year pay a 59-cent tax rate for it.

In Country Club, the only fire department capable of providing the service is San Rafael's. City Mgr. William J. Bielser said that, on a basis of assessed valuation, a Country Club services area would be required to pay a tax rate of over 90 cents for city fire protection — and the city's total tax rate is 99 cents.

BUT — AND HERE is the crux of the matter — the city would not contract to provide fire protection, nor would it annex the area, unless Country Club residents set up an assessment district to replace water lines too small to do the job. Many of the lines are only two-inch diameter. Regardless of a fire department's equipment and manpower, such lines cannot provide enough water for fire fighting.

Cost of the assessment district was computed by County Supervisor Robert A. Roumiguiere at 37 cents on the tax rate for a 20-year period.

Annexation would relieve Country Club residents of a 34-cent county "structural fire protection" tax which gives them no protection, since the county's nearest fire fighting equipment is a brush fire rig in Santa Venetia. It also would relieve them of a 24-cent county library tax. It would impose a 99-cent city tax rate in place of these.

Cost of installing new water mains of adequate size, through an assessment district, would be offset by a reduction in fire insurance cost — if the area were annexed. Only part of the reduction would result if Country Club put in the mains but still had to depend on the county fire department.

WASHINGTON WINDOW

End To Free Spending In House-Passed Bill

By GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some years ago, whenever the House was considering a spending proposal, a congressman from Pennsylvania would regularly demand, "Where's the money coming from?"

His colleagues never had an answer for Rep. Robert Rich. That wasn't the way business was done in Congress.

CONGRESS MAY HAVE to change its ways and answer that question if it completes a budget reform plan voted by the House this month and being considered in the Senate.

The heart of the reform proposal requires Congress to place itself on record definitely, unequivocally, and by specific vote if it approves more government spending than taxes will support. It must then decide, on the record, whether the money is to be raised by increasing taxes or by more borrowing —or whether to reduce the spending.

Under the House-passed bill, Congress twice a year would have to take a look at the whole budget pie to decide the relaionship between money to be spent and taxes to be paid. That has never been done by Congress before. It was once tried but abandoned.

AT PRESENT, Congress operates under what could be labeled the no-budget policy —like a family where each member is allowed to spend for this and that, without considering the grand total or how much money is in the family till.

With spending having not even a distant cousin relationship to income, it would be no surprise to have that family go constantly in debt.

Traditionally, Congress handled the government's purse the same way. It approved separately spending for each government department, or group of departments, without considering what the grand total would be.

The House bill would change that by providing for a legislative budget for the first time in history. It t would work this way:

BY JAN. 15 of each year, the president would send his budget to Congress.

By May 1, Congress would adopt its version of the budget —a tentative one. It would list overall spending figures, with subtotals for each function of government, and show how much was expected from taxes —whether there was to be a deficit or a surplus and what the national debt would be.

The congressional appropriation committees would then go to work on the subtotals. By Aug. 1, Congress would complete action on all the separate appropriation bills. Those below the tentative budget ceilings would be sent to the president. Those above would be held back for more work.

By Sept. 15, Congress would be under deadline to approve its second version of the budget, confirming the original or revising it.

If Congress decided that excess spending was needed for the good of the country, it would have to say then and there where the money should come from. If not, it would order the appropriations cut.

Ford As Vice President Has Unprecedented Independence

The unusual power of Gerald Ford: To me, no man has ever entered upon the vice presidency with such independence available. There are special reasons:

1 — He is the only modern vice president to be chosen by more than one man — the presidential nominee. Ford was recommended by the Democratic speaker of the House of Representatives, nominated by Richard Nixon and confirmed by a Democratic Congress. In significant degree he is vice president in his own right.

2 — President Nixon needs him as much as he needs President Nixon. Ford can do as much — if not more — for the president as the president can do for him.

3 — The vice president will have great freedom to speak his own mind. He has already done so, indicating his approval of wider exceptions to the doctrine of executive privilege than Mr. Nixon had previously accepted.

4 — Ford will have three main jobs: public spokesman for the president; principal negotiator with Congress, and substantial administrative duties. It would not be surprising to see him succeed Melvin Laird as head of the President's Domestic Council.

No vice president has ever played such a large role in governing as is being readied for Ford.

HOW DO NIXON and Ford get on together? Their relations could hardly be better. Ford totally rejects the political ploy that he would be better off to get some distance from the president. If it turns out to hurt him, Ford's attitude is: so be it.

The vice president is not counting on nor is he scheming to find ways to get the 1976 presidential nomination. He may get it; he wouldn't resist it in the least, but right now he is not setting his mind nor his ambition on anything but being the best possible vice president at a time when, for the first time, the vice president is an extraordinarily influential political leader.

WILL SENATOR KENNEDY be the one? At this point he is pulled in opposite directions. The prospects of a Democrat winning the presidency in 1976 look remarkably good. But his mother and the Kennedy family do not want him to run, and he is very uncertain what he wants.

One of his problems is that Watergate is a two-way political force. It will work to help him win because it weakens the Republican Party; but it will also work to help him lose because it accentuates public concern over Chappaquiddick.

This may explain the yes-but answers which the Christian Science Monitor turned up in a recent survey. Of 96 Democratic national committeemen and state chairmen, 75 saw Kennedy as the front-runner for the nomination; but only 34 thought he would get it, and of the 34 only 18 felt sure he could get elected.

KREMLIN TIGHTENS REIN on dissenters. Some seem surprised that detente between the Soviet government and western nations hasn't brought some liberalization internally in Russia. There is no connection.

Suppression of freedom of thought and freedom of speech is the natural byproduct of communism. China and Russia are apart in many ways, but they pursue the same policy of monolithic control of thought.

Soviet communism, as now practiced, couldn't survive if the regime permitted freedom of dissent. Communism is not dictatorship by the proletariat; it is dictatorship over the proletariat.

Three Republicans Eye Bagley's Assembly Post

Candidates are coming out for the Republican nomination in the Ninth Assembly District, now that they are convinced incumbent William T. Bagley will run instead for state controller.

Bagley himself is responsible for encouraging A. Alan Hill to run, and even promised for awhile to endorse him before the primary election in June. Any reader whose pulse raced at the prospect of Hill's candidacy, however, would be in a select group. His obvious handicap is that few know his name, despite his broad experience in top state posts.

Subsequent stirrings by another potential candidate, Sally Rakow, obliged Bagley to retract his unqualified offer to back Hill. Since both would be strong, deserving candidates, Bagley told us, he would make no endorsement if both ran. He said, however, he would endorse Hill if Mrs. Rakow decides against running.

THE ONLY ANNOUNCED candidate for the GOP nomination so far is Albert J. Schloegel of Cotati, a young man with no experience in government or elective office. Democratic candidates already announced are Deputy Marin County Counsel George J. Silvestri Jr. and Jack R. Felson of Forest Knolls. Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum plans to make his entry official on Jan. 13.

Hill, 35, is deputy secretary of the state Agriculture and Services Agency, an umbrella affair with a $310 million budget. As number two man in the cabinet-level secretaryship, Hill makes $33,960 a year, more than an assemblyman's salary and expense account.

He served for three years as administrative assistant to former Sen. John F. McCarthy, then joined the Republican State Central Committee in 1964 as director of public relations. He also has worked as assistant to Norman B. Livermore, secretary of the state Resources Agency, deputy of the state Conservation Department, on the Bay Conservation and Development Commission and Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, where he won a strong conservation record.

Hill and his family have lived in San Rafael for 11 years, making his commute something of a record for distance and tenacity.

Mrs. Rakow, serving her fifth term on the Ross School District board, is Marin field representative for Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District. She also has a long record of activity in local party politics.

Among the advantages she could bring to her candidacy is the fact she is far better known than Hill. It also may be a plus to be a woman in the race.

A ONE-YEAR DELAY in enforcing the Environmental Protection Agency's rigid controls on parking seems to have won an undeserved sigh of relief from many. It would pay to keep in mind that the agency only postponed, and did not drop, its controversial proposals to tax parking spaces up to $450 a year.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Dec. 17, 1963

Arson was suspected in a fire which destroyed the College of Marin gymnasium, with loss estimated at $300,000.

Chapin A. Day II, associate editor of the Independent-Journal, died of cancer at his San Rafael home. He was 49.

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 17, 1953

The California State Board of Equalization approved formation of a special appraisal commission to reappraise all property in Marin County.

With only 5.31 inches of rainfall in San Rafael since July 1, Gen. Mgr. James Peters of Marin Municipal Water District said there was still no danger of a water shortage during the next summer.

President Nixon can't resign now. It will take the rest of his term for the experts to agree on his income tax figures.

Nixon's finances are complicated, but we can all be glad he doesn't keep his records on tape.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Believes Housing Mix Opposed By Majority

As a member of the San Rafael Citizens Advisory Committee and a resident of the Country Club area in east San Rafael, I wish to point out to the I.J. that the article on the front page of last night's paper, "Advisers Favor Mix of Housing," was in my opinion unbalanced. You say that 16 members of the CAC favor heterogeneous mix of housing, but you fail to mention that four homeowner associations in east and west San Rafael have gone on record as opposing this part of the general plan . . .

Technical appendix to the SR Initial General Plan which refers specifically to the Country Club hamlet as follows: "This setting provides for a very particular life style providing a 'close in' location for that segment that desire a close relationship with the natural environment. In order to have this kind of amenity residents forego many of the conveniences and some of the sociability customarily available in the customary suburban development. A goal of this unique area should be the preservation of these particular qualities. A systematic study of grade changes, ownership patterns, views and aspects (particularly of the bay) to determine what steps if any at this point in time, should be taken to preserve some of the distinct character of the area." . . .

If I believe, and I do, that we, the people, are the government, then I must have faith in the majority of the citizens of San Rafael who will see to it that the final plan submitted by the SR Planning Commission to the city council for adoption will be one that will make all residents of SR proud to live here — including those of us in the unincorporated areas; for even though our political affiliations are with the county, our addresses are San Rafael, and when asked where we live, we say "in San Rafael."

Recall Not Simply To Stop Shop Center

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, in their recent letter to the editor, implied that the Town of Corte Madera recalled their councilmen solely because of their support of the Hahn Shopping Center. They are either terribly misinformed or are only speaking for themselves.

As a young voter, I actively supported the recall, but am now actively supporting the election of Al Kostelic to the town council. I feel no qualms, nor am I in a moral dilemma about my working for Al because he is an informed, intelligent and energetic candidate.

According to the March, 1973, town survey, he represents the majority of the people with his stand on the Hahn development. If Hahn agrees to the proposed limited size, our town will gain 32 acres of open marsh land in addition to a constructive, planned shopping center.

Mr. Kostelic, contrary to what his opponents claim, is an advocate of open space and is for controlled growth on a limited and ethical basis. He is not, as many of his opponts are, a believer in the ends justifying the means.

NANCY LUBAMERSKY

What Do They Mean By 'What People Want'?

Since all citizens of Corte Madera do not feel the same on many issues how can some of the candidates repeatedly say, "If elected I will do what the people want me to."

What people? The very verbal minority or the silent majority?

Seven candidates have said they oppose the proposed shopping center (some apparently beyond reconsideration). But the only town survey that has been taken showed more in favor than opposed. Some of their alternate plans for the area, and the present center, would create far worse traffic problems for the town.

After attending all three candidates nights I am still not satisfied with many answers. Anyone promising to do "what the people want" but having a strong preconceived viewpoint on what they want cannot possibly do both if elected.

Why don't you take the Miss Peach cartoon out of the comics in your daily paper instead of Nancy? I like Nancy more than Miss Peach. I hate Miss Peach. It would be nice if you would put Nancy back in your comics. I like the pictures and what they say in Nancy.

What Become Of The Old Neighborhood? It Vanished Into 'Mobile Society'

All it takes is one business transfer in the neighborhood to make you think the whole world's on wheels and rolling. Then that title of Vance Packard's last book, "A Nation of Strangers," comes to mind.

Packard, who describes himself as a "social commentator," got pretty well worked over by people he described as "card-carrying sociologists" when he tried to theorize that a "mobile society" exacts severe penalties.

"WE ARE RAPIDLY losing several critical ingredients of a civilized, salutary society," Packard charged. "We are seeing a sharp increase in people suffering alienation or just feeling adrift, which is having an impact on emotional and even physical health."

"Prove it!" everybody cried. And one of the crankier critics asked: "Why is it that unsupported arguments such as Packard's become popular, while sociological research which challenges it is ignored?"

Well, maybe. But what is this odd emotion we feel when the moving van crawls down the street, bound for Washington, D. C., or Missoula, Mont., followed by the low-sagging car with three children and a dog hanging out the windows for one last look?

"WE, THE LONELY PEOPLE" — that's the title of another book to come to mind now. The current Intellectual Digest publishes a preview-excerpt of Ralph Keyes's lively study, which doubtless will become the new target for "card-carryirg sociologists."

Like Packard, Keyes mourns "rootlessness," "loss of community," and so on. Shamelessly he gilds the past until one sees nostalgic visions of town meetings, church picnics, and Mom-and-Pop stores "where the grocer knew our name."

Come, come, Mr. Keyes! Where are your statistics? Do you think "alienation" came in with the automobile? Can you prove scientifically that "mobility" is a "major enemy" of "intimate friendships"?

LET THE SOCIOLOGISTS mount their attack against this second poaching sentimentalist in their field. But there are feelings that qualify as facts, and Packard and Keyes have autobiography if not "science" on their side.

One can hardly document an absence. But an absence of "belonging" to someone or something does appear to be a national mood, an interpretation of facts if not quite a fact itself.

And surely one can document the struggle to fill this absence with improvised communities: communes; encounter groups; the tent-cities of rock festivals; even the invisible, late-night voice world of hotlines and radio talk programs. A verifiable hunger is here.

One senses — if one cannot prove — that words like "neighbor" mean something rather different from what they once did. And that a part of the sadness we feel as the moving van disappears down the street is because we don't feel sadder.

EVEN THE "MOBICENTRIS" man might, with Keyes, feel a pang of dismay at the serene prediction: "The people who will live successfully in tomorrow's world are those who can accept and enjoy temporary systems."

McLuhan's phrase, "global village," solves the dilemma neatly — on paper. But that's a concept the card-carrying sociologists are going to have to prove to the rest of us.

"Nice place to visit," we say, "but we wouldn't want to live there."

Livermore, secretary of the state Resources Agency, deputy of the state Conservation Department, on the Bay Conservation and Development Commission and Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, where he won a strong conservation record.

Hill and his family have lived in San Rafael for 11 years, making his commute something of a record for distance and tenacity.

Mrs. Rakow, serving her fifth term on the Ross School District board, is Marin field representative for Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District. She also has a long record of activity in local party politics.

Among the advantages she could bring to her candidacy is the fact she is far better known than Hill. It also may be a plus to be a woman in the race.

A ONE-YEAR DELAY in enforcing the Environmental Protection Agency's rigid controls on parking seems to have won an undeserved sigh of relief from many. It would pay to keep in mind that the agency only postponed, and did not drop, its controversial proposals to tax parking spaces up to $450 a year.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Dec. 17, 1963

Arson was suspected in a fire which destroyed the College of Marin gymnasium, with loss estimated at $300,000.

Chapin A. Day II, associate editor of the Independent-Journal, died of cancer at his San Rafael home. He was 49.

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 17, 1953

The California State Board of Equalization approved formation of a special appraisal commission to reappraise all property in Marin County.

With only 5.31 inches of rainfall in San Rafael since July 1, Gen. Mgr. James Peters of Marin Municipal Water District said there was still no danger of a water shortage during the next summer.

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

President Nixon can't resign now. It will take the rest of his term for the experts to agree on his income tax figures.

Nixon's finances are complicated, but we can all be glad he doesn't keep his records on tape.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Believes Housing Mix Opposed By Majority

As a member of the San Rafael Citizens Advisory Committee and a resident of the Country Club area in east San Rafael, I wish to point out to the I.J. that the article on the front page of last night's paper, "Advisers Favor Mix of Housing," was in my opinion unbalanced. You say that 16 members of the CAC favor heterogeneous mix of housing, but you fail to mention that four homeowner associations in east and west San Rafael have gone on record as opposing this part of the general plan . . .

Technical appendix to the SR Initial General Plan which refers specifically to the Country Club hamlet as follows: "This setting provides for a very particular life style providing a 'close in' location for that segment that desire a close relationship with the natural environment. In order to have this kind of amenity residents forego many of the conveniences and some of the sociability customarily available in the customary suburban development. A goal of this unique area should be the preservation of these particular qualities. A systematic study of grade changes, ownership patterns, views and aspects (particularly of the bay) to determine what steps if any at this point in time, should be taken to preserve some of the distinct character of the area." . . .

If I believe, and I do, that we, the people, are the government, then I must have faith in the majority of the citizens of San Rafael who will see to it that the final plan submitted by the SR Planning Commission to the city council for adoption will be one that will make all residents of SR proud to live here — including those of us in the unincorporated areas; for even though our political affiliations are with the county, our addresses are San Rafael, and when asked where we live, we say "in San Rafael."

Recall Not Simply To Stop Shop Center

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, in their recent letter to the editor, implied that the Town of Corte Madera recalled their councilmen solely because of their support of the Hahn Shopping Center. They are either terribly misinformed or are only speaking for themselves.

As a young voter, I actively supported the recall, but am now actively supporting the election of Al Kostelic to the town council. I feel no qualms, nor am I in a moral dilemma about my working for Al because he is an informed, intelligent and energetic candidate.

According to the March, 1973, town survey, he represents the majority of the people with his stand on the Hahn development. If Hahn agrees to the proposed limited size, our town will gain 32 acres of open marsh land in addition to a constructive, planned shopping center.

Mr. Kostelic, contrary to what his opponents claim, is an advocate of open space and is for controlled growth on a limited and ethical basis. He is not, as many of his opponts are, a believer in the ends justifying the means.

NANCY LUBAMERSKY

What Do They Mean By 'What People Want'?

Since all citizens of Corte Madera do not feel the same on many issues how can some of the candidates repeatedly say, "If elected I will do what the people want me to."

What people? The very verbal minority or the silent majority?

Seven candidates have said they oppose the proposed shopping center (some apparently beyond reconsideration). But the only town survey that has been taken showed more in favor than opposed. Some of their alternate plans for the area, and the present center, would create far worse traffic problems for the town.

After attending all three candidates nights I am still not satisfied with many answers. Anyone promising to do "what the people want" but having a strong preconceived viewpoint on what they want cannot possibly do both if elected.

Would Like 'Nancy' Instead Of 'Miss Peach'

Why don't you take the Miss Peach cartoon out of the comics in your daily paper instead of Nancy? I like Nancy more than Miss Peach. I hate Miss Peach. It would be nice if you would put Nancy back in your comics. I like the pictures and what they say in Nancy.

All it takes is one business transfer in the neighborhood to make you think the whole world's on wheels and rolling. Then that title of Vance Packard's last book, "A Nation of Strangers," comes to mind.

Packard, who describes himself as a "social commentator," got pretty well worked over by people he described as "card-carrying sociologists" when he tried to theorize that a "mobile society" exacts severe penalties.

"WE ARE RAPIDLY losing several critical ingredients of a civilized, salutary society," Packard charged. "We are seeing a sharp increase in people suffering alienation or just feeling adrift, which is having an impact on emotional and even physical health."

"Prove it!" everybody cried. And one of the crankier critics asked: "Why is it that unsupported arguments such as Packard's become popular, while sociological research which challenges it is ignored?"

Well, maybe. But what is this odd emotion we feel when the moving van crawls down the street, bound for Washington, D. C., or Missoula, Mont., followed by the low-sagging car with three children and a dog hanging out the windows for one last look?

"WE, THE LONELY PEOPLE" — that's the title of another book to come to mind now. The current Intellectual Digest publishes a preview-excerpt of Ralph Keyes's lively study, which doubtless will become the new target for "card-carryirg sociologists."

Like Packard, Keyes mourns "rootlessness," "loss of community," and so on. Shamelessly he gilds the past until one sees nostalgic visions of town meetings, church picnics, and Mom-and-Pop stores "where the grocer knew our name."

Come, come, Mr. Keyes! Where are your statistics? Do you think "alienation" came in with the automobile? Can you prove scientifically that "mobility" is a "major enemy" of "intimate friendships"?

LET THE SOCIOLOGISTS mount their attack against this second poaching sentimentalist in their field. But there are feelings that qualify as facts, and Packard and Keyes have autobiography if not "science" on their side.

One can hardly document an absence. But an absence of "belonging" to someone or something does appear to be a national mood, an interpretation of facts if not quite a fact itself.

And surely one can document the struggle to fill this absence with improvised communities: communes; encounter groups; the tent-cities of rock festivals; even the invisible, late-night voice world of hotlines and radio talk programs. A verifiable hunger is here.

One senses — if one cannot prove — that words like "neighbor" mean something rather different from what they once did. And that a part of the sadness we feel as the moving van disappears down the street is because we don't feel sadder.

EVEN THE "MOBICENTRIS" man might, with Keyes, feel a pang of dismay at the serene prediction: "The people who will live successfully in tomorrow's world are those who can accept and enjoy temporary systems."

McLuhan's phrase, "global village," solves the dilemma neatly — on paper. But that's a concept the card-carrying sociologists are going to have to prove to the rest of us.

"Nice place to visit," we say, "but we wouldn't want to live there."

DOMINICAN HOLDS ANNUAL ART SALE

Mary Anne Pavia, a student from New Mexico at Dominican College, admires ceramic work displayed at the San Marco Gallery on the San Rafael campus. The fifth annual December sale of works by students at the college, held Friday and Saturday, raised $400 to help finance art department equipment and exhibits. A similar event will be held at the end of April.

Cheese It! What A Rowdy Time As Old Mission Sleeps

SONOMA (UPI) –The old Mission San Francisco de Solano slumbered through the Sunday night as it has for 150 years, but across Spain street at the corner cheese factory all hell broke loose.

It is difficult to get the events in sequence, since the reporter's notes were dampened by rain and the geyser.

The geyser occurred when a Greyhound bus, faced with the street barricade, tried to back up and broke a hydrant. Behind the barricade was the sound of two shotgun blasts, twelve milling lawmen, a cloud of tear gas, a fire truck and a garbage wagon.

It all started at 4 o'clock in the morning, when Patrolman Bob Wieworka spotted two men in the sales room of the cheese factory.

The garbage collector reported from the rear of the building that one of the men was armed. The policeman called the sheriff's substation in nearby Agua Caliente for reinforcement. When the first deputy arrived, the trio peering through the windows made out two men inside, one of them with a shotgun.

"At this point the lawmen backed off to talk over the situation," reporter Bill Lynch said.

A shotgun blast was heard inside. The patrolmen called for more assistance. Reinforcements arrived, six more policemen headed by Chief Gene Cartwright.

The chief hurled a cannister of "CS" gas at a window but hit the frame instead. The cannister bounced back like a handball and ignited. The lawmen scattered.

Next came a second shotgun blast, this time through a window. Someone summoned a fire truck. The reason is not exactly clear; there was plenty of water everywhere.

More gas was thrown through broken windows, but the invaders could not be dislodged. The siege had now lasted some four hours. A spearhead task force formed up, headed by Chief Cartwright and Sheriff's Lieutenant Leroy Kobza. They entered the gas-filled building. There was no one in the sales room. The posse went upstairs and forced its way into a small apartment, shared by cheesemaker Jorge Escobido and Aristoe Avila Rojas, who works in the nearby French bakery. Coughing and wheezing, eyes filled with tears, the posse was able to discern Escobido and Rojas, bottles on the table between them, obviously enjoying a relaxing if lengthy evening.

Both men were surprised at the entrance of the task force and had noticed neither the gas nor the besieging forces in the streets outside. They willingly accompanied the lawmen to the nearest police car, which would not start because of a dead battery.

Neither culprit was completely articulate but their story seemed to have been that they thought they heard an invader and, armed with a double barreled shotgun, went downstairs to investigate. Returning to the apartment one of them thought he discerned the invader in the room and fired pointblank, blasting their mutual chest of drawers to bits. Then to empty the second barrel of the gun he fired through the nearest window.

Finally lodged in pokey, the maker of Swiss cheese and the assistant French baker were to be booked, according to police, for illegal immigration from Mexico, plus discharging a firearm within the city limits.

Inouye Decries Oil Blackmail

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Americans must not "be attracted to the banner of anti-Semitism" because of the oil shortage Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii said in a weekend speech.

"We wish no ill to Arab states, but as a responsible leader in the world, we must pass the message that blackmail is not going to work," Inouye said in a speech sponsored by the Jewish National Fund.

The oil blackmail is likely to lead to blackmail of essential materials by other nations, he said.

Prezoning On Novato Agenda

The Novato City Council will consider prezoning about 6,600 acres of unincorporated land in the Mount Burdell area at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Novato Community House.

The council had adopted a policy to protect Mount Burdell and surrounding property from development and retain it as an open-space area.

The policy covers about 8,000 acres, including 1,386 acres already in the city.

FOCUS

Heavier-Than-Air

It was December 17, 1903. They were two unknown bicycle mechanics from Dayton, Ohio. Their unwieldly craft resembled nothing so much as a large kite. It weighed 750 pounds, including the pilot load and a homemade 12-horsepower gasoline engine. Three days before, it had failed to fly. Now, just 70 years ago today, on the wind-swept dunes of Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, the Wright brothers tried again. This time it took them only 12 seconds to win lasting fame and launch the age of flight. In those historic seconds, their craft flew only 120 feet, less than the wing-span of some of today's jets. Only four fishermen and a friend of the Wrights witnessed their first flight.

DO YOU KNOW — Which of the Wright brothers made the first powered flight?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The British East India Company was granted the colonial tea monopoly.

GAIL HARRIS

Kidnapers Kept Getty Blindfolded

ROME (AP) — The mother of J. Paul Getty III says her son was kept blindfolded during most of his five-month captivity and never saw the faces of any of his kidnapers.

Young Getty's mother, the former actress Gail Harris, spent all day yesterday with her son in the Rome clinic to which he was taken after he turned up early Saturday in southern Italy.

Police sources said the 17-year-old grandson of oil billionaire J. Paul Getty was under sedation at the clinic and was unable to give a coherent account of his long ordeal.

But two Rome newspapers said he told his mother he was conscious when his kidnapers were cutting off his right ear, which a Rome newspaper received on Nov. 10 as proof that the boy was being held.

"They hit me on the head to knock me out, but I felt everything," Getty reportedly said. "It was terrible. But I will not get a plastic ear made. I don't want to forget this moment of my life."

His family reportedly paid a ransom of $2.7 million for his release. A police patrol found him at a gasoline station near Lagonegro, 125 miles south of Naples, early Saturday.

"Every time we started talking of the kidnaping he would burst into tears," said a police spokesman.

Nixon Train Cost Could Top Plane

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ever since a White House spokesman announced that President Nixon may take a train instead of a plane to Florida to set an example of fuel-saving, newmen and railroad buffs have been trying to figure out just how much fuel— if any—will be saved.

An Amtrak spokesman said that because all the Florida trains are filled to capacity at this time of the year, Nixon will ride in a separate eight-car second section which will travel behind the regularly scheduled passenger train.

The President's separate train will require its own diesel engines, each of which burns fuel at the rate of 1.5 to 2 gallons per mile. Railroad sources say at least two diesel engines, and possibly three, would be needed to haul the presidential train.

Assuming that each diesel unit burns fuel at the minimum rate of 1.5 gallons a mile, the trip of 1,178 miles from Washington to Miami using two engines would consume slightly more than 3,500 gallons of diesel fuel.

By comparison, the presidential jet burns fuel at the rate of 2,000 gallons per hour for the two-hour trip to south Florida—a total of 4,000 gallons.

Thus, if the special train burns more than the minimum amount of fuel or if it requires more than two diesel units, Nixon actually could burn more fuel going by train than by plane.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the President was considering making the train trip when he goes to Florida Dec. 26. The arrangements are apparently still open.

In addition to the engines, there is the energy cost of security arrangements. Thousands of state and local policemen must be driven to every bridge, overpass and culvert to guard the President's train as it passes. Railroad men must "spike down" every switch, and every other train along the route must stop well ahead of time and be standing still as the President passes.

Guerrilla Group Pledges New Attacks Of Violence

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A guerrilla group says it is responsible for the slaying of a prison guard and has vowed to set up "air battery teams" for use against police aircraft.

The San Francisco Chronicle said in today's edition it received a letter from the "August Seventh Guerrilla Movement," the fifth such message from the group received by the newspaper.

The letter also threatened to "execute" more prison officials, including the state director of corrections.

The organization said earlier it was responsible for the shooting down last October of an Oakland Police helicopter in which two officers were killed.

Oakland police have never confirmed that they believe the movement was responsible for the crash.

In the latest letter, the guerrilla group said it would "establish permanent air battery teams operating highpower armor piercing equipment in order to protect the people from police spying and intimidation from the air."

The organization also warned it would use "twelve units" for a "series of attacks on the Parole and Community Service Divisions of the Department of Corrections."

The group takes its name from the date in 1970 when four persons, including Judge Harold J. Haley, were killed in an escape attempt from the Marin County Civic Center.

The letter received by the Chronicle said the movement played a part in the slaying of guard Jerry Sanders, 53, on Nov. 27 at Deuel Vocational Institute.

A note was left in the shirt pocket of the guard which "announces the fact," the message said.

Prison authorities said yesterday Sanders was stabbed to death while making his rounds but no note was found.

The letter said "guerrilla command cells" have been formed over the last five months "in every major prison in the state."

Up to 6 inches of snow piled up in parts of Washington, D.C., and caused most schools in the capital to close for the day.

The National Weather Service posted a variety of snow, gale wind and travelers' warnings for the area as the storm intensified and moved north from the Washington, D.C., area. Up to 12 inches of snow was forecast in eastern Pennsylvania.

Freezing temperatures glazed highways, making travel dangerous. Authorities said at least two persons were killed on slippery roads in Virginia.

Snow, sleet and freezing rain blitzed the New York metropolitan area. New York City was forced to cancel for a second time a plan to transform Fifth Avenue into a pedestrian mall, and the city's half-fare mass transit plan yesterday got off to a slow start as subfreezing temperatures scared off subway and bus riders from an inexpensive ride.

Snow showers lingered over Lake Michigan. A spokesman at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago said two planes owned by United Air Lines and Eastern Air Lines became stuck in the mud near the end of the airport runway.

Kidnapers Kept Getty Blindfolded

ROME (AP) — The mother of J. Paul Getty III says her son was kept blindfolded during most of his five-month captivity and never saw the faces of any of his kidnapers.

Young Getty's mother, the former actress Gail Harris, spent all day yesterday with her son in the Rome clinic to which he was taken after he turned up early Saturday in southern Italy.

Police sources said the 17-year-old grandson of oil billionaire J. Paul Getty was under sedation at the clinic and was unable to give a coherent account of his long ordeal.

But two Rome newspapers said he told his mother he was conscious when his kidnapers were cutting off his right ear, which a Rome newspaper received on Nov. 10 as proof that the boy was being held.

"They hit me on the head to knock me out, but I felt everything," Getty reportedly said. "It was terrible. But I will not get a plastic ear made. I don't want to forget this moment of my life."

His family reportedly paid a ransom of $2.7 million for his release. A police patrol found him at a gasoline station near Lagonegro, 125 miles south of Naples, early Saturday.

"Every time we started talking of the kidnaping he would burst into tears," said a police spokesman.

Guerrilla Group Pledges New Attacks Of Violence

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A guerrilla group says it is responsible for the slaying of a prison guard and has vowed to set up "air battery teams" for use against police aircraft.

The San Francisco Chronicle said in today's edition it received a letter from the "August Seventh Guerrilla Movement," the fifth such message from the group received by the newspaper.

The letter also threatened to "execute" more prison officials, including the state director of corrections.

The organization said earlier it was responsible for the shooting down last October of an Oakland Police helicopter in which two officers were killed.

Oakland police have never confirmed that they believe the movement was responsible for the crash.

In the latest letter, the guerrilla group said it would "establish permanent air battery teams operating highpower armor piercing equipment in order to protect the people from police spying and intimidation from the air."

The organization also warned it would use "twelve units" for a "series of attacks on the Parole and Community Service Divisions of the Department of Corrections."

The group takes its name from the date in 1970 when four persons, including Judge Harold J. Haley, were killed in an escape attempt from the Marin County Civic Center.

The letter received by the Chronicle said the movement played a part in the slaying of guard Jerry Sanders, 53, on Nov. 27 at Deuel Vocational Institute.

A note was left in the shirt pocket of the guard which "announces the fact," the message said.

Prison authorities said yesterday Sanders was stabbed to death while making his rounds but no note was found.

The letter said "guerrilla command cells" have been formed over the last five months "in every major prison in the state."

Nixon Train Cost Could Top Plane

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ever since a White House spokesman announced that President Nixon may take a train instead of a plane to Florida to set an example of fuel-saving, newmen and railroad buffs have been trying to figure out just how much fuel— if any—will be saved.

An Amtrak spokesman said that because all the Florida trains are filled to capacity at this time of the year, Nixon will ride in a separate eight-car second section which will travel behind the regularly scheduled passenger train.

The President's separate train will require its own diesel engines, each of which burns fuel at the rate of 1.5 to 2 gallons per mile. Railroad sources say at least two diesel engines, and possibly three, would be needed to haul the presidential train.

Assuming that each diesel unit burns fuel at the minimum rate of 1.5 gallons a mile, the trip of 1,178 miles from Washington to Miami using two engines would consume slightly more than 3,500 gallons of diesel fuel.

By comparison, the presidential jet burns fuel at the rate of 2,000 gallons per hour for the two-hour trip to south Florida—a total of 4,000 gallons.

Thus, if the special train burns more than the minimum amount of fuel or if it requires more than two diesel units, Nixon actually could burn more fuel going by train than by plane.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the President was considering making the train trip when he goes to Florida Dec. 26. The arrangements are apparently still open.

In addition to the engines, there is the energy cost of security arrangements. Thousands of state and local policemen must be driven to every bridge, overpass and culvert to guard the President's train as it passes. Railroad men must "spike down" every switch, and every other train along the route must stop well ahead of time and be standing still as the President passes.

Deduction Ruled Out In Nixon Gift

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spokesman for President Nixon says the chief executive has no intention of reaping a huge income tax deduction from the eventual gift of his San Clemente home to the government.

The New York Times reported yesterday that such a gift could give Nixon a tax deduction of between $390,000 and $870,000 spread over six years.

"Any assertion that the President would use the gift of his home to the American people as a short term tax deduction in 1974 is false," said Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren.

"The idea that the President would utilize the gift of the home to the American people for a short term tax benefit completely misses the spirit of the gift."

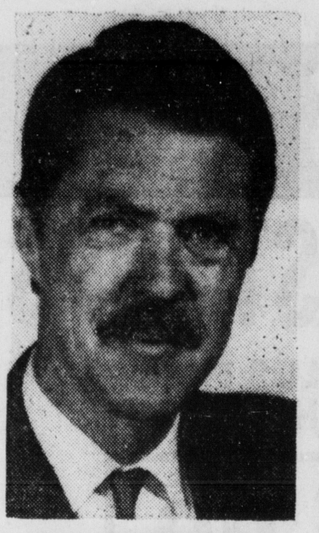
Nixon had said earlier that the gift would be made after both he and his wife are dead.

The Times quoted tax lawyers familiar with Nixon's financial affairs as saying such a tax break could come at the time that another huge tax deduction is expiring, the President's gift to the National Archives of his pre-presidential papers.

White House press aide Bruce Whelihan told the Times that the actual deed giving the San Clemente property to the American people has not yet been drawn up because the President's lawyers have not had the time and added that "nobody has figured out the tax consequences" of the planned gift.

In the statement of the Nixon's net worth made public last weekend, the value of the San Clemente property was set at $571,000. But that figure was based on the original cost of the property and tax experts say the value has increased considerably.

The property is currently valued at $1.3 million by California authorities, the Times said, and some public officials in the state have argued that it ought to be valued as high as $2.9 million.



ROY FARRINGTON JONES
To seek fourth term

Jones Asks To Retain Ross Seat

Roy Farrington Jones, Ross town councilman for three terms, today said he will seek a fourth term in municipal elections March 5.

Jones said there are several issues which he would like to see resolved while he is on the council including adoption of a general plan and completion of a master plan for water main renewals.

"I'm interested in seeing the town stay as it is, as much as one can expect it to stay as it is now," he said.

The 48-year-old Jones was first elected to the council in 1962 and was reelected in 1966 and 1970.

He served on the citizens Advisory Committee in both Ross and neighboring San Anselmo. He was a director of the Town of Ross Property Owners Association.

Jones was born in San Francisco and spent most of his life in Marin County.

He was reared in San Anselmo and graduated from Tamalpais High School in 1942. Since 1946 he has been a partner in the realty firm of Farrington Jones and Son.

He and his wife, Nancy, live at 20 Olive Avenue. They have two daughters.

The terms of Jones and Mayor Frederick S. Allen expire i March. Allen has filed for reelection.

Supreme Court To Decide California Pregnancy Rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether California is violating the Constitution by excluding normal pregnancy from coverage under a disability insurance program for state employes.

State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger appealed a ruling to that effect by a three-judge federal panel in San Francisco last May 31. The panel held that the practice violated the 14th Amendment's guarantee of "equal protection of the laws."

The court will hear arguments later this term and issue a written opinion.

The program was first proposed in 1946 when Earl Warren was governor to supplement the state's unemployment insurance.

It provides benefits for almost any other incapacity, from psychiatric disorders to sex change operations, according to lawyers for a group of women who brought the suit challenging the exclusion of pregnancy from coverage.

In another case, the Court made it harder to bring a single "class action" lawsuit in a Federal Court on behalf of numerous individuals with the same complaint.

Four Vermont residents had sued to represent about 200 landowners along Lake Champlain who claim their property has been damaged by sludge from a Ticonderoga, N.Y., plant. The court ruled they could sue for themselves but not the others.

Justice Byron R. White wrote the 6-3 majority opinion, which could have a bearing on class suits now pending in the District of Columbia against eight drug companies and against the city of New York over drinking water diversions from the Delaware River.

Also, the Court agreed today to examine the conflict between military and civilian authority over service personnel charged with illegally using marijuana while off base and off duty.

The circuit court last July issued an injunction blocking an Army court-martial trial of Capt. Bruce R. Councilman on charges of possessing and selling marijuana while off duty and off the base.

Councilman was accused of giving and selling marijuana to an Army enlisted man while both were out of uniform in the captain's apartment and ostensibly off duty. The enlisted man actually was on an undercover assignment.

The Supreme Court also:

Dismissed a challenge to a Washington state tax of 3.6 per cent on electricity sold out of state.

Denied a hearing to Mrs. Madeline Wolfe of Miami, who was fired from her job as a telephone operator for Dade County because she was 53 pounds overweight.

Refused to review a Federal Trade Commission ruling forbidding a company to make advertising claims not backed by "scientific tests."

Council To Fill Planner's Seat

The San Rafael City Council will fill a vacant seat on the city planning commission in open session at 8 p.m. today at city hall.

The seat was vacated by former commission chairman Jorgen V. Lunding, who was fired by the city council.

The council will also consider appointment of a citizens advisory committee on open space acquisition.

The city administration has recommended that a public hearing on protests to annexation of the Country Club area, originally set for today, be postponed to 5 p.m. Dec. 28.

Novato Issues Tennis Challenge

Novato city officials have challenged the mayors and councilmen of Marin's 10 other cities to a round robin tennis match Jan. 19 and 20 at Olive Ridge Tennis Club.

A $250 cash prize donated by the club will be awarded to a charity designated by the winning city.

The tournament will be open to the public free.

Double Heart Transplant Fails

PARIS (UPI) — A 51-year-old electrician, Andre Boucays, a double heart transplant patient last week, died yesterday, hospital officials said today.

The hospital did not say what was the cause of death.

Prof. Christian Cabrol performed the first transplant last Tuesday with the heart of a 21-year-old woman who had been killed in a traffic accident.

The heart gave signs of failing and Cabrol carried out a second transplant Thursday. The donor was unknown.

Ford Leads Group Studying Legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Assuming a growing leadership role, Vice President Gerald R. Ford presided over a meeting today of a group of top administration and congressional leaders to discuss 1974 legislative proposals.

The White House said the meeting was focused on human and community affairs legislation. It was the third such session at which Ford has presided to map legislative strategy for next year. Previous ones were on energy and the economy.

In the survey taken Nov. 13-16, Harris said 45 per cent of those questioned responded they would respect President Nixon more if he resigned in favor of Ford, compared to 31 per cent who said they would not.

When asked if they felt Ford would be able to concentrate better on urgent national problems because of noninvolvement in Watergate, 69 per cent agreed while 16 per cent disagreed.

At this morning's legislative conference at the White House, Ford met with Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan, Transportation Secretary Claude S. Brinegar, Budget Director Roy L. Ash, HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Melvin R. Laird, Nixon's top domestic affairs adviser.

The GOP congressional delegation was headed by Ford's successor as House GOP Leader, Rep. John Rhodes, Ariz., and Sens. Robert P. Griffin, Mich., and Howard H. Baker Jr., Tenn.

Woman Reports An Attacker

A Marin woman was sexually attacked today in Larkspur by a man who hid in her unlocked car while she visited friends, police said today.

The woman returned to her car in Greenbrae about 2:30 a.m. Her attacker sat in the rear seat so that she could not see him and told her he had a weapon, she told police.

He made her stop the car after she had driven in Larkspur for a short time, blindfolded her and raped her, police said.

Deduction Ruled Out In Nixon Gift

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spokesman for President Nixon says the chief executive has no intention of reaping a huge income tax deduction from the eventual gift of his San Clemente home to the government.

The New York Times reported yesterday that such a gift could give Nixon a tax deduction of between $390,000 and $870,000 spread over six years.

"Any assertion that the President would use the gift of his home to the American people as a short term tax deduction in 1974 is false," said Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren.

"The idea that the President would utilize the gift of the home to the American people for a short term tax benefit completely misses the spirit of the gift."

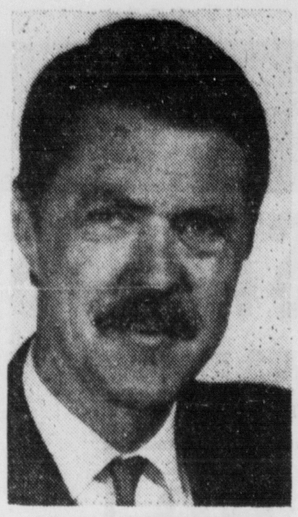
Nixon had said earlier that the gift would be made after both he and his wife are dead.

The Times quoted tax lawyers familiar with Nixon's financial affairs as saying such a tax break could come at the time that another huge tax deduction is expiring, the President's gift to the National Archives of his pre-presidential papers.

White House press aide Bruce Whelihan told the Times that the actual deed giving the San Clemente property to the American people has not yet been drawn up because the President's lawyers have not had the time and added that "nobody has figured out the tax consequences" of the planned gift.

In the statement of the Nixon's net worth made public last weekend, the value of the San Clemente property was set at $571,000. But that figure was based on the original cost of the property and tax experts say the value has increased considerably.

The property is currently valued at $1.3 million by California authorities, the Times said, and some public officials in the state have argued that it ought to be valued as high as $2.9 million.



ROY FARRINGTON JONES
To seek fourth term

Jones Asks To Retain Ross Seat

Roy Farrington Jones, Ross town councilman for three terms, today said he will seek a fourth term in municipal elections March 5.

Jones said there are several issues which he would like to see resolved while he is on the council including adoption of a general plan and completion of a master plan for water main renewals.

"I'm interested in seeing the town stay as it is, as much as one can expect it to stay as it is now," he said.

The 48-year-old Jones was first elected to the council in 1962 and was reelected in 1966 and 1970.

He served on the citizens Advisory Committee in both Ross and neighboring San Anselmo. He was a director of the Town of Ross Property Owners Association.

Jones was born in San Francisco and spent most of his life in Marin County.

He was reared in San Anselmo and graduated from Tamalpais High School in 1942. Since 1946 he has been a partner in the realty firm of Farrington Jones and Son.

He and his wife, Nancy, live at 20 Olive Avenue. They have two daughters.

The terms of Jones and Mayor Frederick S. Allen expire i March. Allen has filed for reelection.

Supreme Court To Decide California Pregnancy Rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether California is violating the Constitution by excluding normal pregnancy from coverage under a disability insurance program for state employes.

State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger appealed a ruling to that effect by a three-judge federal panel in San Francisco last May 31. The panel held that the practice violated the 14th Amendment's guarantee of "equal protection of the laws."

The court will hear arguments later this term and issue a written opinion.

The program was first proposed in 1946 when Earl Warren was governor to supplement the state's unemployment insurance.

It provides benefits for almost any other incapacity, from psychiatric disorders to sex change operations, according to lawyers for a group of women who brought the suit challenging the exclusion of pregnancy from coverage.

In another case, the Court made it harder to bring a single "class action" lawsuit in a Federal Court on behalf of numerous individuals with the same complaint.

Four Vermont residents had sued to represent about 200 landowners along Lake Champlain who claim their property has been damaged by sludge from a Ticonderoga, N.Y., plant. The court ruled they could sue for themselves but not the others.

Justice Byron R. White wrote the 6-3 majority opinion, which could have a bearing on class suits now pending in the District of Columbia against eight drug companies and against the city of New York over drinking water diversions from the Delaware River.

Also, the Court agreed today to examine the conflict between military and civilian authority over service personnel charged with illegally using marijuana while off base and off duty.

The circuit court last July issued an injunction blocking an Army court-martial trial of Capt. Bruce R. Councilman on charges of possessing and selling marijuana while off duty and off the base.

Councilman was accused of giving and selling marijuana to an Army enlisted man while both were out of uniform in the captain's apartment and ostensibly off duty. The enlisted man actually was on an undercover assignment.

The Supreme Court also:

Dismissed a challenge to a Washington state tax of 3.6 per cent on electricity sold out of state.

Denied a hearing to Mrs. Madeline Wolfe of Miami, who was fired from her job as a telephone operator for Dade County because she was 53 pounds overweight.

Refused to review a Federal Trade Commission ruling forbidding a company to make advertising claims not backed by "scientific tests."

Council To Fill Planner's Seat

The San Rafael City Council will fill a vacant seat on the city planning commission in open session at 8 p.m. today at city hall.

The seat was vacated by former commission chairman Jorgen V. Lunding, who was fired by the city council.

The council will also consider appointment of a citizens advisory committee on open space acquisition.

The city administration has recommended that a public hearing on protests to annexation of the Country Club area, originally set for today, be postponed to 5 p.m. Dec. 28.

Novato Issues Tennis Challenge

Novato city officials have challenged the mayors and councilmen of Marin's 10 other cities to a round robin tennis match Jan. 19 and 20 at Olive Ridge Tennis Club.

A $250 cash prize donated by the club will be awarded to a charity designated by the winning city.

The tournament will be open to the public free.

Double Heart Transplant Fails

PARIS (UPI) — A 51-year-old electrician, Andre Boucays, a double heart transplant patient last week, died yesterday, hospital officials said today.

The hospital did not say what was the cause of death.

Prof. Christian Cabrol performed the first transplant last Tuesday with the heart of a 21-year-old woman who had been killed in a traffic accident.

The heart gave signs of failing and Cabrol carried out a second transplant Thursday. The donor was unknown.

Sikhs Will Sing Christmas Carols

Followers of the Sikh religion who live in an ashram on San Rafael's Culloden Park Road will sing Christmas carols at Marin County hospitals this week.

Members of the group will appear at Marin General Hospital at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday; Novato Convalescent Hospital, 2 p.m. Friday, and Mill Valley Convalescent Hospital, 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Ford Leads Group Studying Legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Assuming a growing leadership role, Vice President Gerald R. Ford presided over a meeting today of a group of top administration and congressional leaders to discuss 1974 legislative proposals.

The White House said the meeting was focused on human and community affairs legislation. It was the third such session at which Ford has presided to map legislative strategy for next year. Previous ones were on energy and the economy.

In the survey taken Nov. 13-16, Harris said 45 per cent of those questioned responded they would respect President Nixon more if he resigned in favor of Ford, compared to 31 per cent who said they would not.

When asked if they felt Ford would be able to concentrate better on urgent national problems because of noninvolvement in Watergate, 69 per cent agreed while 16 per cent disagreed.

At this morning's legislative conference at the White House, Ford met with Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan, Transportation Secretary Claude S. Brinegar, Budget Director Roy L. Ash, HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and Melvin R. Laird, Nixon's top domestic affairs adviser.

The GOP congressional delegation was headed by Ford's successor as House GOP Leader, Rep. John Rhodes, Ariz., and Sens. Robert P. Griffin, Mich., and Howard H. Baker Jr., Tenn.

Woman Reports An Attacker

A Marin woman was sexually attacked today in Larkspur by a man who hid in her unlocked car while she visited friends, police said today.

The woman returned to her car in Greenbrae about 2:30 a.m. Her attacker sat in the rear seat so that she could not see him and told her he had a weapon, she told police.

He made her stop the car after she had driven in Larkspur for a short time, blindfolded her and raped her, police said.

Girls Learn Woody Craft

MRS. HEATHER Mueller puts pine cones in the oven as she prepares for a Camp Fire Girls meeting at her home in Tiburon. The green, closed cones opened in perfect shape for the della robbia tree project after six house in the 200 degree oven. (Photos by Alfred Arn)

By PAT BALMES

Children can make dela robbia trees from the pine cones, nuts, pods and dried flowers they collect, to decorate their homes or give as gifts.

The woody craft was taught to 10-year-olds at a meeting of Bel-Aire School Camp Fire Girls last week at the home of their guardian, Mrs. Heather Mueller of Tiburon.

"Always collect wherever you go. I have backpacked seven miles with pinon cones in my pack. Collecting makes you aware of so many beautiful trees and their fruits. You want to name them so you can find them again. You want to evaluate the texture of the fruit and its color changes and experiment to learn the best way to attach it to a frame," she said.

(Hikers should be aware that all natural features are protected by law at Muir Woods National Monument, Samuel P. Taylor State Park, Mount Tamalpais State Park and Point Reyes National Seashore and collecting is not encouraged on Marin Municipal Water District property.)

Before the meeting she prepared the specimens the Camp Fire Girls had collected. They had picked closed, green pine cones for her to bake in a 200 degree oven for six hours so the cones would open into perfectly shaped firm cones.

She soaked half of her collections of light and dark apricot and peach pits in liquid bleach. Using an electric drill, Mrs. Mueller made holes in smooth nuts. If you don't have a drill, you can wire and glue on eucalyptus pods and pine cones, she suggested.

THE ARTIST cut some large cones horizontally and some vertically with an electric saw for easier fit and to add variety. Having collected fresh, unbroken material that would not decompose, the Camp Fire Girls had a variety of pine cones, hollow eucalyptus pods and seeds, dried artichokes, yarrow, many kinds of acorns, brazil nuts, amber balls, sycamore balls, deodora cedar pods, buckeyes, pomegranate centers, goldenrod and staghorn and sphagnum mosses.

Mrs. Mueller advised her students "to build the mechanics thoughtfully," and use sturdy frames of wire, wood or styrofoam as a base on which to stick, wire and glue the della robbia materials.

The girls wrapped the styrofoam trees with brown paper (denim may be used) because some places inevitably show through, and secured the paper with bobby pins.

They painted insides of squat mustard jard either dark green or brown, leaving the outside unpainted for a shiny effect. When the jars dried, the trees were glued onto the bases.

"Either stick in all the materials with pins or anchor a few nuts securely at random and glue clusters around the pinned anchor or glue some on at random. Let them dry for 15 minutes and then glue others around the more secure piece," directed Mrs. Mueller.

HER DAUGHTER Ann put dabs of dark brown linoleum glue on the end of a two-inch twig and inserted it into a teazel. Then putting the tar-like glue on the other end, she stuck the teazel into the styrofoam.

Liz Fishman threaded No. 22 weight wire through a pierced nut and twisted the wire to stick it into the tree. Around these anchors the girls glued clusters of cones and nuts.

Although the girls stuck materials in at random, they kept in mind the principle that 75 per cent of the project should be repetition of the same fruit, 20 per cent should be repetition of a different fruit and 5 per cent should be contrast. More formal trees could be made by graduated rings of different varieties, she said.

"Use enough variety to provide contrast," said Mrs. Mueller, pointing out wreaths and swags that decorate her home, which have dashes of chartreuse staghorn moss, golden tones of yarrow and goldenrod and unusual shapes like the sunburst of a cotton pod. Pine cones cut at odd angles fan out like flowers when they are bakes. She twists off the tips of soft spruce cones to make tiny roses.

Mrs. Mueller taught the tirls to make "contrived flowers" using a teazel as a center and gluing in petals from pine cones or long, fragil mimosa pods or silver moons from the lunaria bush (money tree) or, for smaller teazels, the seeds of pumpkins or watermelons.

FOR A FROSTED effect, the artist dips a few nuts into white glue and rolls them in clear glitter. She sprays the completed della robbia project with either dull or shiny varathane.

Mrs. Mueller adivses putting the finished product in the freezer or spraying it with moth proofing to kill insects and worms.

Because the 10-year olds attention span is about one hour, she said, she planned a project which could be completed in that time.

Wreaths and swags are ambitious projects even for very patient adults. When she makes a wreath she makes sure she has enough similar sized pine cones to circle the outside of the frame radiating outward and to circle the inside pointing toward the center. She wires each cone around several rings of the wire form for security.

The three centers of interest are never centered, she mentioned. When she made the large swag, which decorates her white marble fireplace yearround, she constructed a wooden backing and drilled holes in it at random for wires. She wrapped chicken wire around places where the clusters would be heaviest.

Della robbia decorations are monochromatic but interesting because of contrast of smooth and rough textures, of light and dark shades and of the occasional dashes of contrasting color, she said.

Friendly Visits More Enjoyable If You Prepare

Whether for a holiday week, weekend or just overnight, a visit from friends or relatives and their children will be more enjoyable if you are prepared. With children, much depends on how many and their ages. Rules that apply to your own children should also be followed by young guests, according to the Soap and Detergent Association. Where play is permitted, snacks allowed and neighborhood "roaming" limits.

Since weather is unpredictable, it's smart to have alternate entertainment in mind. Beside suitable indoor games, keep in mind local movies, museum program and other places of interest to young people. Find out in advance, starting times or hours open.

In addition, there are certain bottleneck situations, such as, handwashing before meals that can erupt into shoving and good-natured arguments among lively youngsters. This adds nothing to last minute meal preparations. So before time to serve a meal, arrange the seating and the handwashing line-up. Let the youngest be first with an older child behind to help if needed. Be sure to have soap and a good supply of clean towels handy. And ask the last in the line-up to wipe up the splashes around the basin.

Church To Hold Family Evening

A family celebration will be held at the Mill Valley First Baptist Church 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

The Christmas program and party involves adult church members, Sunday School children, and the Baptist Women's Missionary Society. An informal musical program is planned, with carol singing and refreshments.

Mrs. Gideon B. Fredrich is chairman.

By MARGARET DE MIRAVEL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PARIS — Fashion is in reverse gear again. Retrospective looks for spring and summer, 1974, replace many of the tame classics of the past few seasons.

Ready-to-wear designers, including all the top Paris couture names, play up flashback effects spanning various decades from the 1900 granny dresses through the 1920's and 30's with soft and supple silhouettes, limp bias cut fabrics, longer hemlines. "Flou," as the French describe a mood, is the antithesis of strict tailoring and architectural construction.

There's been a lot of chitchat about the drop in hemlines, but it's not a four-alarm bell, and many buyers are wary of midcalf skirts after the financial fiasco of the midi a few years ago. Certainly the new direction is downward but not an ultimatum. "To each, her own" . . . different lengths for different hours and occasions with many designers opting for "safe" skirts hovering just below the knees, a la Chanel, or the romantic ankle-length dresses derived from this past summer's "swirl" skirt.

MANY JUNIOR collections skip right back to the turn of the century; the granny dresses (definitely slated for today's great-grandchildren and not authentic grannies, please) in wistful calico prints trimmed with lace, hemstitched insets, and flounced with ruffles, or big skirts as Kenzo shows propped out over frilled petticoats.

While pants are entrenched in most wardrobes as a veritable way of life, dresses and skirts will tend to edge out the tomboy whose closet contains nothing but a few pairs of scruffy jeans. "There's a definite feeling for a less casual way of dressing," says Yves Saint Laurent, although he still shows 30 trouser ensembles in his 94-piece collection.

THE 1930s exert the prevailing influence on dresses, in both one- and two-piece effects. There are always the old college photos, complete with nonstop skirts, two-toned shoes, droopy sleeves, frizzy hair, gypsy kerchiefs, turbans, and cloches, alluring in their own way — and now exceptionally well updated.

Dresses evolve with bias cut or gored skirts beneath a smooth hipline, sashed waists, princess backwraps tied in a soft bow, blouson tops with deep-cut armholes and big sleeves shirred on above the natural shoulder line and cuffed above the elbows. Two-piece styles often revive the old

Mrs. Mueller advised her students "to build the mechanics thoughtfully," and use sturdy frames of wire, wood or styrofoam as a base on which to stick, wire and glue the della robbia materials.

The girls wrapped the styrofoam trees with brown paper (denim may be used) because some places inevitably show through, and secured the paper with bobby pins.

They painted insides of squat mustard jard either dark green or brown, leaving the outside unpainted for a shiny effect. When the jars dried, the trees were glued onto the bases.

"Either stick in all the materials with pins or anchor a few nuts securely at random and glue clusters around the pinned anchor or glue some on at random. Let them dry for 15 minutes and then glue others around the more secure piece," directed Mrs. Mueller.

HER DAUGHTER Ann put dabs of dark brown linoleum glue on the end of a two-inch twig and inserted it into a teazel. Then putting the tar-like glue on the other end, she stuck the teazel into the styrofoam.

Liz Fishman threaded No. 22 weight wire through a pierced nut and twisted the wire to stick it into the tree. Around these anchors the girls glued clusters of cones and nuts.

Although the girls stuck materials in at random, they kept in mind the principle that 75 per cent of the project should be repetition of the same fruit, 20 per cent should be repetition of a different fruit and 5 per cent should be contrast. More formal trees could be made by graduated rings of different varieties, she said.

"Use enough variety to provide contrast," said Mrs. Mueller, pointing out wreaths and swags that decorate her home, which have dashes of chartreuse staghorn moss, golden tones of yarrow and goldenrod and unusual shapes like the sunburst of a cotton pod. Pine cones cut at odd angles fan out like flowers when they are bakes. She twists off the tips of soft spruce cones to make tiny roses.

Mrs. Mueller taught the tirls to make "contrived flowers" using a teazel as a center and gluing in petals from pine cones or long, fragil mimosa pods or silver moons from the lunaria bush (money tree) or, for smaller teazels, the seeds of pumpkins or watermelons.

FOR A FROSTED effect, the artist dips a few nuts into white glue and rolls them in clear glitter. She sprays the completed della robbia project with either dull or shiny varathane.

Mrs. Mueller adivses putting the finished product in the freezer or spraying it with moth proofing to kill insects and worms.

Because the 10-year olds attention span is about one hour, she said, she planned a project which could be completed in that time.

Wreaths and swags are ambitious projects even for very patient adults. When she makes a wreath she makes sure she has enough similar sized pine cones to circle the outside of the frame radiating outward and to circle the inside pointing toward the center. She wires each cone around several rings of the wire form for security.

The three centers of interest are never centered, she mentioned. When she made the large swag, which decorates her white marble fireplace yearround, she constructed a wooden backing and drilled holes in it at random for wires. She wrapped chicken wire around places where the clusters would be heaviest.

Della robbia decorations are monochromatic but interesting because of contrast of smooth and rough textures, of light and dark shades and of the occasional dashes of contrasting color, she said.

Friendly Visits More Enjoyable If You Prepare

Whether for a holiday week, weekend or just overnight, a visit from friends or relatives and their children will be more enjoyable if you are prepared. With children, much depends on how many and their ages. Rules that apply to your own children should also be followed by young guests, according to the Soap and Detergent Association. Where play is permitted, snacks allowed and neighborhood "roaming" limits.

Since weather is unpredictable, it's smart to have alternate entertainment in mind. Beside suitable indoor games, keep in mind local movies, museum program and other places of interest to young people. Find out in advance, starting times or hours open.

In addition, there are certain bottleneck situations, such as, handwashing before meals that can erupt into shoving and good-natured arguments among lively youngsters. This adds nothing to last minute meal preparations. So before time to serve a meal, arrange the seating and the handwashing line-up. Let the youngest be first with an older child behind to help if needed. Be sure to have soap and a good supply of clean towels handy. And ask the last in the line-up to wipe up the splashes around the basin.

Church To Hold Family Evening

A family celebration will be held at the Mill Valley First Baptist Church 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

The Christmas program and party involves adult church members, Sunday School children, and the Baptist Women's Missionary Society. An informal musical program is planned, with carol singing and refreshments.

Mrs. Gideon B. Fredrich is chairman.

By MARGARET DE MIRAVEL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PARIS — Fashion is in reverse gear again. Retrospective looks for spring and summer, 1974, replace many of the tame classics of the past few seasons.

Ready-to-wear designers, including all the top Paris couture names, play up flashback effects spanning various decades from the 1900 granny dresses through the 1920's and 30's with soft and supple silhouettes, limp bias cut fabrics, longer hemlines. "Flou," as the French describe a mood, is the antithesis of strict tailoring and architectural construction.

There's been a lot of chitchat about the drop in hemlines, but it's not a four-alarm bell, and many buyers are wary of midcalf skirts after the financial fiasco of the midi a few years ago. Certainly the new direction is downward but not an ultimatum. "To each, her own" . . . different lengths for different hours and occasions with many designers opting for "safe" skirts hovering just below the knees, a la Chanel, or the romantic ankle-length dresses derived from this past summer's "swirl" skirt.

MANY JUNIOR collections skip right back to the turn of the century; the granny dresses (definitely slated for today's great-grandchildren and not authentic grannies, please) in wistful calico prints trimmed with lace, hemstitched insets, and flounced with ruffles, or big skirts as Kenzo shows propped out over frilled petticoats.

While pants are entrenched in most wardrobes as a veritable way of life, dresses and skirts will tend to edge out the tomboy whose closet contains nothing but a few pairs of scruffy jeans. "There's a definite feeling for a less casual way of dressing," says Yves Saint Laurent, although he still shows 30 trouser ensembles in his 94-piece collection.

THE 1930s exert the prevailing influence on dresses, in both one- and two-piece effects. There are always the old college photos, complete with nonstop skirts, two-toned shoes, droopy sleeves, frizzy hair, gypsy kerchiefs, turbans, and cloches, alluring in their own way — and now exceptionally well updated.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Should She Forgive Husband And Friend For Brief Affair?

DEAR HELEN:

My kind and always loving husband confessed he had a brief affair with my best friend. Barney says he still cares for Nelda, but not in a physical way. That attraction is over, for both of them.

It happened when Nelda's husband and I were out of town (in different directions) and "they were both lonely."

Barney wants us to continue our friendship with this couple. We've been a very close foursome for 15 years and have great times together. I'd be miserable without them, and would you believe — I still consider Nelda my best friend!

But, am I foolish to think this thing wouldn't start up again, and is something wrong with me for not feeling bitter and jealous? At least not much?

Don't get the idea we're swinging couples. We've always been completely true to our spouses, but Barney and Nelda "just happened."

Do you think we could continue as if "nothing happened?" — LOVE HIM, LEAVE THEM?

DEAR LHLT:

Fifteen years ago, I would probably have said, "No!" because, back then, sexual jealousy was something most wives couldn't handle: One infidelity might send couples into divorce court — perhaps to their lifelong regret.

But today (as your letter proves) mates are better able to understand temptations, recognize when they're gone, and shift into past "tense."

Since you want this friendship continued, I'd suggest an open talk with Nelda. When you're sure the brief affair was "from loneliness," and was over almost before it began, I see no reason why you can't (almost) forget it as if "nothing happened."

Because evidently (almost) nothing did! — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I have something to say to "B.F." who thinks her elderly mother is "wonderful" — so long as she stays with her brother's family (who also wants to get rid of her). Why don't they all try giving back a little of the love she gave to them? Why don't they appreciate all the housework and baby-sitting she does —or else chip in and get her a place of her own, which would make her old age happy?

I'm 24 now, but when I was very young I was thrown into my grandmother's lap. She kept me until I was 6, and then my parents took me back, "insisting" that Grandma come to live with them.

She cooked, baked, cleaned, sewed for everyone, baby-sat in the evenings and, in addition, took a long bus ride each day to work at a factory. And she did more than her share to help with finances.

But the adults never had a kind word for her. They complained when she didn't do things right and resented it when she asked small favors. I love her because she held me when I was hurt and paid attention to me when no one else seemed to care. I guess she stayed, mostly for her grandchildren.

Well, she's 81 now, and very soon, when my husband and I get our home, she'll come to live with us. I only wish I could make it up to her for all those years she felt she was imposing while, actually, she was doing so much! — FOR NATIONAL GRANDMOTHER'S DAY — EVERY DAY!

DEAR HELEN:

"Hurt" brought up a problem that is getting heavier every year: What do grandparents do about all the step-grandchildren?

I have five natural grandchildren, three former daughters-in-law, and three present daughters-in-law — who have 10 children between them. I can't give 15 expensive Christmas gifts, and birthdays are getting to be nightmares. If you give lesser gifts to the steps than to the naturals, there's always a "Hurt" among the new wives.

What's a step-grandparent of many to do? — GRANDMA WHO LIVED IN A SHOE

DEAR GRANDMA:

Worry a lot, probably. And give lesser gifts all around — but perhaps something special for the natural grandchildren when the steps aren't present. — H.

The 1930s and '20s so often intermingle, and it usually takes a real expert to define the precise year of a decisive change.

One of the most famous Paris fashion mannequins of the 1930's attended the collective ready-to-wear showing presented by leading French couture houses and was able to "date" almost every ensemble parading on stage: "Schiaparelli did that type of dress in 1937 . . . a typical Lanvin look for spring, '38 . . . PARIS HAS actually been tooting 1920 nostalgia for almost a year since publicity commenced for the film, "The Great Gatsby." Even mannequins have been chosen to personify the fragile reed-thin image of Mia Farrow tripping out in pleated crepe dresses and long loose cardigans, the tennis sweater sets in natural ecru yarns banded with club stripes, the revival of the real afternoon dress, and "tea gowns" slated for evening and hostess wear.

Sweatshirts To Be Multicolored

Worn-Out Nylons Have Many Uses

Worn-out nyulons have the following uses:

To dry walnuts, flower bulbs, fill stockings and hang in a dry place.

Fill them with camphor. Then loop them around the hanging bars in a closet.

Use them to make the bodies of dried apple dolls.

When a cord is permanently attached to a small appliance, always be sure the control is in "off" position before it is plugged into a wall socket, advises the home economics department of the Pacific Gas and Electric. Co.

When you are finished using the appliance, turn the control back to "off," remove the cord from the wall socket and then remove the cord from the appliance.

To unplug any appliance from the wall socket, take hold of the plug, not the cord, and pull gently.

Sweatshirts To Be Multicolored

Worn-Out Nylons Have Many Uses

Worn-out nyulons have the following uses:

To dry walnuts, flower bulbs, fill stockings and hang in a dry place.

Fill them with camphor. Then loop them around the hanging bars in a closet.

Use them to make the bodies of dried apple dolls.

When a cord is permanently attached to a small appliance, always be sure the control is in "off" position before it is plugged into a wall socket, advises the home economics department of the Pacific Gas and Electric. Co.

When you are finished using the appliance, turn the control back to "off," remove the cord from the wall socket and then remove the cord from the appliance.

To unplug any appliance from the wall socket, take hold of the plug, not the cord, and pull gently.

Instructions Can Save On Wash Energy

The California Department of Consumer Affairs suggests consumers follow the instruction booklets that come with washers and dryers. The following suggestions will help get the most energy saving performance from the appliances.

Wait until you have a full load before operating the washer or dryer, but not so full clothes cannot circulate freely.

Whenever possible use warm water instead of hot. A cold rinse is good for removing lint, preventing fading and keeping permanent press items from wrinkling. Keep in mind though that hot water is more effective in killing bacteria.

Don't over wash. A 10 to 15-minute wash cycle is recommended for regular clothes; five minutes for delicate items and five minutes for permanent press.

Follow instructions for using detergents for your style machine. Oversudsing makes the motor work harder.

If there is a laundry tub next to the washer save hot, sudsy water from the wash to clean garden tools, barbecues and other household equipment.

Remove lint from washer and dryer filters each time. Clean equipment means cleaner clothes. Clogged filters interrupt the circulation of water and air. When filters are clogged the operating costs are higher.

Overdrying clothes can cause shrinkage, wrinkling and faster wear and wastes energy. If the machine has different fabric settings, use them. An automatic moisture sensor prevents under or overdrying by stopping the dryer when a pre selected moisture level is reached.

A dryer should be vented to the outdoors to prevent a collection of moisture and lint in the laundry room.

Some Investing, Insurance Advice

By JOSEPHINE RIPLEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

I am a 29-year-old woman, single, and have always been ignorant when it comes to money management. My salary is in the $12,000 range, and I would like to handle it better in the future then in the past.

What kinds of investments would you suggest? Can you refer me to some good reading material on maney management?

Also, I want to invest in a life-insurance policy that would give my parents a measure of financial security if I should predecease them, and also provide some form of long-range savings for me. How do I go about finding a competent insurance broker?

S.M.B., ATLANTA, GA.

You should consult a reputable stock broker, tell him what you want to achieve, and what your circumstances are. He should be able to work out a suitable portfolio for you. Consider all the possibilities: growth stocks, income stocks, bonds, mutual funds, and so on.

Talk things over in detail and make it your business to find out as much as you can about the companies in which you propose to invest.

You will find many books on money management in the public library or book stores. Or you might be interested in an adult education course on the subject. Such courses are given in many of the public schools today and in community colleges.

As to life insurance, why not contact a few of the well known insurance companies; find out what they have to offer and choose the policy which seems best suited to your purpose.

I WOULD like to know the best way to be sure my home will go to my stepdaughter and her husband with the least amount of trouble after my passing. I have the deed in my name and theirs. I have been wondering if I should also put this in my will, or would it be best to change it to their names right now?

MRS. H.L.,
NEW LEBANON, OHIO

You have already done all that is necessary. Upon your decease, the property will legally belong to your stepdaughter and her husband under the present arrangement.

I AM a widow with no children. After my husband's passing several years ago, I made a will and made my lawyer my executor, but now I am wondering if that was a wise thing to do. Is it desirable, under the circumstances, to have only one party in charge?

W.S., ST. LOUIS, MO.

If you have a lawyer as executor, he is under the direction of the court in the handling of your estate. He would be subject to censure if he failed to carry out his responsibilities properly.

MY HUSBAND is 75 and I am 66. We are considering moving to the South, where we feel there would be advantages weather-wise and price-wise. We wonder if we should buy a small home there — after renting a year to try out the climate. . .

On financial matters, we have been wondering if my husband should take advantage of the tax-free federal gift allowance ($3,000 a year or a lifetime gift of $30,000) in a gift to me that might reduce the inheritance tax should he predecease me.

MRS. J.J.R., ST. PAUL, MINN.

Yes, you would be wise to try living in the South for a time before you sell your present home and move there permanently.

On the subject of the federal inheritance tax, unless your husband's estate exceeds $120,000, there would seem to be no point in using the tax-free gift exemption.

To begin with, an estate is exempt from the federal inheritance tax unless it exceeds $60,000. In addition, for married couples, there is a marital deduction which permits either spouse to leave half of his estate to the other free of tax. This raises the amount of nontaxable estates to a minimum of $120,000 for married couples — half under the $60,000 exemption, half under the marital deduction.

Instructions Can Save On Wash Energy

The California Department of Consumer Affairs suggests consumers follow the instruction booklets that come with washers and dryers. The following suggestions will help get the most energy saving performance from the appliances.

Wait until you have a full load before operating the washer or dryer, but not so full clothes cannot circulate freely.

Whenever possible use warm water instead of hot. A cold rinse is good for removing lint, preventing fading and keeping permanent press items from wrinkling. Keep in mind though that hot water is more effective in killing bacteria.

Don't over wash. A 10 to 15-minute wash cycle is recommended for regular clothes; five minutes for delicate items and five minutes for permanent press.

Follow instructions for using detergents for your style machine. Oversudsing makes the motor work harder.

If there is a laundry tub next to the washer save hot, sudsy water from the wash to clean garden tools, barbecues and other household equipment.

Remove lint from washer and dryer filters each time. Clean equipment means cleaner clothes. Clogged filters interrupt the circulation of water and air. When filters are clogged the operating costs are higher.

Overdrying clothes can cause shrinkage, wrinkling and faster wear and wastes energy. If the machine has different fabric settings, use them. An automatic moisture sensor prevents under or overdrying by stopping the dryer when a pre selected moisture level is reached.

A dryer should be vented to the outdoors to prevent a collection of moisture and lint in the laundry room.

Some Investing, Insurance Advice

By JOSEPHINE RIPLEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

I am a 29-year-old woman, single, and have always been ignorant when it comes to money management. My salary is in the $12,000 range, and I would like to handle it better in the future then in the past.

What kinds of investments would you suggest? Can you refer me to some good reading material on maney management?

Also, I want to invest in a life-insurance policy that would give my parents a measure of financial security if I should predecease them, and also provide some form of long-range savings for me. How do I go about finding a competent insurance broker?

S.M.B., ATLANTA, GA.

You should consult a reputable stock broker, tell him what you want to achieve, and what your circumstances are. He should be able to work out a suitable portfolio for you. Consider all the possibilities: growth stocks, income stocks, bonds, mutual funds, and so on.

Talk things over in detail and make it your business to find out as much as you can about the companies in which you propose to invest.

You will find many books on money management in the public library or book stores. Or you might be interested in an adult education course on the subject. Such courses are given in many of the public schools today and in community colleges.

As to life insurance, why not contact a few of the well known insurance companies; find out what they have to offer and choose the policy which seems best suited to your purpose.

I WOULD like to know the best way to be sure my home will go to my stepdaughter and her husband with the least amount of trouble after my passing. I have the deed in my name and theirs. I have been wondering if I should also put this in my will, or would it be best to change it to their names right now?

MRS. H.L., NEW LEBANON, OHIO

You have already done all that is necessary. Upon your decease, the property will legally belong to your stepdaughter and her husband under the present arrangement.

I AM a widow with no children. After my husband's passing several years ago, I made a will and made my lawyer my executor, but now I am wondering if that was a wise thing to do. Is it desirable, under the circumstances, to have only one party in charge?

W.S., ST. LOUIS, MO.

If you have a lawyer as executor, he is under the direction of the court in the handling of your estate. He would be subject to censure if he failed to carry out his responsibilities properly.

MY HUSBAND is 75 and I am 66. We are considering moving to the South, where we feel there would be advantages weather-wise and price-wise. We wonder if we should buy a small home there — after renting a year to try out the climate. . .

On financial matters, we have been wondering if my husband should take advantage of the tax-free federal gift allowance ($3,000 a year or a lifetime gift of $30,000) in a gift to me that might reduce the inheritance tax should he predecease me.

MRS. J.J.R., ST. PAUL, MINN.

Yes, you would be wise to try living in the South for a time before you sell your present home and move there permanently.

On the subject of the federal inheritance tax, unless your husband's estate exceeds $120,000, there would seem to be no point in using the tax-free gift exemption.

To begin with, an estate is exempt from the federal inheritance tax unless it exceeds $60,000. In addition, for married couples, there is a marital deduction which permits either spouse to leave half of his estate to the other free of tax. This raises the amount of nontaxable estates to a minimum of $120,000 for married couples — half under the $60,000 exemption, half under the marital deduction.

VISIONARY COLLAGES — The pieces of silver, the glittering crown of thorns, and all of the other imagery in "Calamitous Annunciation" are collage elements derived from pictorial magazine illustrations. This collage and others by Michael Keating along with drawings by Lauren Elder, are currently on display at the Aragorn Gallery in Larkspur.

ART REVIEW

Keating Shows Two Faces In His Work

By ADA GARFINKEL

Artist Michael Keating received his bachelor's degree in philosophy before earning his master's degree in fine arts from the San Francisco Art Institute.

The collage elements—supplemented by linear drawing—are culled from a variety of pictorial magazines. Some are contoured to the basic shape—the shepherd with his flock of sheep, a nautilus, a wreath of orchids — and placed against a neutral or contrasting background. Others evolve or mutate into forms such as the crown of thorns with its sparkle and spiky prongs derived from illustrations of reflecting sunlight on water.

Physical, spatial, and spiritual ascendance are the essence of Keating's metaphysical visions. He draws upon man's continuous concern with basic elements—earth, fire, water, and air—translating the latter as a sphere of heightened awareness.

Time as an attribute of transition, such as seasonal change or decay, and geometric forms as symbols of rational order are also important.

"Visitation" portrays both physical and spiritual ascendance, with a snowy peak rising above barren trees, rolling lands and grazing sheep. The work culminates at the peak in a crescendo of flaring, trumpet shaped forms.

Keating's repeated use of a spiraling landscape format tends to become a cliche, and one or two of his works lose plasticity amidst a welter of disparate symbolism. On the whole, however, his is a fresh and imaginative encounter with ready-made elements metamorphosed visually and aesthetically beyond their separate origins.

Lauren Elder, who is making her second appearance at the Aragorn Gallery, shows three large colored pencil drawings with the same carefully controlled, tapestry-like tactility she exhibited in the earlier show. Her most interesting one is "Rainbow Bridge," a perspective view of a floating nude reaching out to embrace a gigantic camellia.

"Mirage" shows the flux of time with a seated figure which seems to dissolve and merge with the impressionistically drawn background, while her lion-companion's mane begins to calcify and crack.

Both exhibits will continue through Jan. 15, and may be viewed Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The gallery is located at 260 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur.

Five Indians Arrested At Timber Cutting Site

OLD STATION (UPI) — Five Pit Indians were arrested at a Sugar Loaf Mountain timber cutting site during the weekend when they refused to leave the area they claim belongs to their tribe.

About 50 other Indians still remain in the vicinity of the closed Lassen National Forest land and armed rangers were flown in yesterday to protect logging operations.

Saturday's arrests followed a week-long occupation of the cutting site by Indians that have allegedly scared off tree cutters from the Burney Logging Co. The firm operates on the land under contract with the U.S. Forest Service.

Arraignment of the five, two couples and a 21-year-old man from Eastern Shasta County, was scheduled today before a U.S. magistrate in Redding.

MUSIC REVIEW

College Concert Is Quite Good

By SYLVIA L. RUBY

John Myers' College of Marin Community Orchestra performed a generally successful concert last night in the Fine Arts Theater.

The string sound is better than ever, and it is gratifying to note the growing proportion of students to adults, demonstrating the strength of the music program in the college and other Marin County schools.

The opening overture from Glinka's "A Life for the Czar" was beautifully played. It is an historically interesting opera, since it led to the development of the Russian nationalist school of music later perfected by such composers as Borodin, Mussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakov.

Portentous interludes and folk-derived melodies alternate throughout the overture. Glinka could not move gracefully from one to the other, but Myers kept it moving and glued together with a precise timing and a great range of dynamic interpretation.

Luigini's Ballet Egyptien is a well-recognized period piece with its ideas less Egyptian than a French composer's 1860 conception of how Near Eastern music should sound. It contains slithering melodies and makes much use of triangle and tambourine.

Nonetheless, it is a fun piece to listen to. Verdi thought highly enough of it to incorporate it in the Lyon production of his opera Aida, since ballets were mandatory in French produced operas.

Violins played the lilting dance melodies of the first movement, and the flowing legato lines of the Andante sostenuto, well under concertmaster Rhonda Bingham. The quick shift to the allegro section of the last movement was brightly picked up by the strings but temporarily dropped by the rest of the orchestra.

The eight short pieces for string choir by Hindemith appear deceptively easy. Although they belong to the "learning-pieces" he wrote for amateurs and students, and the first position violin is used exclusively, instrumentalists are highly exposed and the dissonances are never so extreme that intonation can falter unnoticed.

The balance of the two violin sections, violas, and cellos was perfect, and the contrapuntal texture well-defined by each group. The final little repeat by first violins — pianissimo was a delight.

The performance of Beethoven's Fourth Symphony was less satisfying. Intonation strayed on more than one occasion, once quite noticeably at an awkward page turn for the violins. The essential lyricism of the violin melody of the second movement was missing, although its restatement by flutist Mark Schneider was lovely. Schneider and clarinetist Wayne Ellerman kept the woodwinds afloat throughout much of the work.

The scherzo, however, was lively in tempo, the woodwind choir redeemed itself, and the finale was performed with flair and precision.

Slope Moratorium To Be Considered

Building moratoriums on sloped lands in Larkspur will be reviewed by the Larkspur City Council at 8 p.m. Wednesday in city hall.

The construction bans, passed and then extended earlier this year, were to be removed after the city adopted its general plan. The plan was adopted Dec. 3.

Holiday Program To Be Given Wednesday

Instrumental, guitar and vocal groups from the Kentfield School District will present a holiday music program Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the College of Marin gymnasium.

Adaline E. Kent Junior High School's orchestra and jazz ensemble and a district-wide intermediate chorus will be among the performers.

Christmas Music Program Tonight

Persons who sang with the College of Marin chorus between 1934 and 1959 will present a program of Christmas music tonight at the San Rafael High School Auditorium.

The program, sponsored by the San Rafael City Schools music department, will begin at 8:15 p.m.

Taxpayers Line Will Be Opened

A toll-free telephone system to answer taxpayers' questions will be started Jan. 2 by the Internal Revenue Service.

The network will be served by a panel of 50 tax specialists at the IRS center in San Francisco. Part of a nationwide system to be operated throughout the year, the regional network will cover an area stretching from San Mateo to Eureka.

The number for persons dialing from Belvedere and Sausalito will be 556-1040. From Mill Valley, Corte Madera, San Rafael, Ignacio and Novato, it will be 457-9600.

The number for taxpayers in other areas will be 800-772-2345.

Holiday Party Set Wednesday At Cotati Plaza

A Christmas celebration will take place in Cotati's bandstand in the city plaza Wednesday.

At 3 p.m. students from St. Joseph's School of Religion will stage a Nativity scene, which will be followed by caroling led by a choir from St. Joseph's Church.

At about 4:30 p.m., Santa Claus will make his first appearance ever in the plaza, and hand out candy canes.

The program, which its sponsors hope will become an annual event, was planned by the city's chamber of commerce and park and recreation commission.

Richard Roundtree, Wife, Are Divorced

CHICAGO (UPI) — Television and movie star Richard Roundtree and his wife Mary Jane, who have been separated for five years, have received a divorce from Cook County Circuit Court Judge Kenneth E. Wilson.

Under terms of the settlement this week, Roundtree, star in the movie and television productions of "Shaft," will pay $35,000 a year in alimony and child support.

DANCE REVIEW

Marin Civic Ballet Sparkles In 'Nutcracker' Performance

By MARIE RAMEAU

Youth was the keynote for the Marin Civic Ballet's performances of "Nutcracker" this weekend at the Marin Veterans' Auditorium. Not only the dancers, but chorus and orchestra as well, gave a radiant rendition of this well-known Christmas ballet treat.

Having observed this company for a numberof seasons, I found in Saturday's performance continued actual growth as well as increased potential growth in the youthful company.

While I have previously never looked forward to the first act's party scene, this time it was really alive and together, with very few dramatic gaps — indicating remarkable poise on the part of the young dancers and particularly the kiddies. The latter, for example, appeared truly to enjoy performing and showed not the slightest sign of stage fright. In general, too, this usually laborious scene flowed easily and pleasurably with all the cheer one could expect of the brightest of Christmases.

The battle between the mice and the toy soldiers was lively but somewhat lacking in cohesion: for example, there was a lot of action but it was lacking in focus, so that one never got the impression that the battle was "for real."

The corps de ballet for the Snow Scene was disappointing simply because of the pointe work of the girls, which was very heavy. The pas de deux, on the other hand, was a gem of poise, danced by Laura Przetak as the Snow Queen and Charles Perrier as the Snow Prince, well-matched in timing and precise, classical lines.

Act two, in the "Palace of the Sugar Plum Fairy," was a sunny winter day's delight, full of pageantry, followed by dances in Spanish, Russian, Arabian and Chinese styles. The strongest of these was the Arabian dance, performed by Laurie Klein, a success due mainly to her own wit and meticulous attention to stylistic detail. The Chinese dance was also pert and filled with humor. The Russian number could have been more interesting choreographically, but was spirited and gusty. Weakest was the Spanish dance — not because of a lack of attack on the part of the dancers, but because of some timing flaws. The two Ribbon Candy dancers were delectably costumed, performing simple but piquant classical steps almost entirely on pointe, with an ease which even exceeded their technical level.

The Waltz of the Flowers could have been less stiff, but I noticed that the stage floor seemed to be troubling some of the dancers — a factor which can bring down even the best-prepared of performances. But the piece was graciously done.

The Grand Pas de Deux, danced by Kathi McCormick and Richard Cook, more than met my expectations. Cook radiated a truly joyful and easy presence both as partner and in his own variation, and Miss McCormick continues to amaze me in her overall development as a maturing young ballerina.

Her serenity, elegance, musicality and technical competence should foretell a successful professional career for her in the near future.

ART REVIEW

Keating Shows Two Faces In His Work

By ADA GARFINKEL

Artist Michael Keating received his bachelor's degree in philosophy before earning his master's degree in fine arts from the San Francisco Art Institute.

The collage elements—supplemented by linear drawing—are culled from a variety of pictorial magazines. Some are contoured to the basic shape—the shepherd with his flock of sheep, a nautilus, a wreath of orchids — and placed against a neutral or contrasting background. Others evolve or mutate into forms such as the crown of thorns with its sparkle and spiky prongs derived from illustrations of reflecting sunlight on water.

Physical, spatial, and spiritual ascendance are the essence of Keating's metaphysical visions. He draws upon man's continuous concern with basic elements—earth, fire, water, and air—translating the latter as a sphere of heightened awareness.

Time as an attribute of transition, such as seasonal change or decay, and geometric forms as symbols of rational order are also important.

"Visitation" portrays both physical and spiritual ascendance, with a snowy peak rising above barren trees, rolling lands and grazing sheep. The work culminates at the peak in a crescendo of flaring, trumpet shaped forms.

Keating's repeated use of a spiraling landscape format tends to become a cliche, and one or two of his works lose plasticity amidst a welter of disparate symbolism. On the whole, however, his is a fresh and imaginative encounter with ready-made elements metamorphosed visually and aesthetically beyond their separate origins.

Lauren Elder, who is making her second appearance at the Aragorn Gallery, shows three large colored pencil drawings with the same carefully controlled, tapestry-like tactility she exhibited in the earlier show. Her most interesting one is "Rainbow Bridge," a perspective view of a floating nude reaching out to embrace a gigantic camellia.

"Mirage" shows the flux of time with a seated figure which seems to dissolve and merge with the impressionistically drawn background, while her lion-companion's mane begins to calcify and crack.

"A Standing Venus" is a surrealistic tableau perched in vast, open space. Venus and a reclining lion occupy the central position. A pair of huge, blindfolded gooney birds and a gigantic egg with human lips are at the left of the picture. Visual balance is restored by her presentation of each image in a lighter tone — almost like an agueous reflection in the atmospheric vapor.

Both exhibits will continue through Jan. 15, and may be viewed Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The gallery is located at 260 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur.

BOBCAT GETS A HELPING HAND

Warrant Issued In Fund Skimming

The former general manager of a San Quentin Prison employee group is being sought on charges of skimming $4,000 off the organization's profits.

Joseph R. Wardell failed to show up in Marin Municipal Court yesterday and Judge David R. Baty issued a warrant for his arrest.

Specifically, Wardell, of 59 Madera Avenue, San Anselmo, is charged with forging the name of an officer of the San Quentin Employees Mutual Benefit Association to a loan application. Wardell, an employee of the association, had no other connection with the prison.

Furthermore, Wardell, who ran the association for 20 years, is under investigation in connection with other schemes by which he is thought to have defrauded the group of an unknown amount of additional money.

According to the district attorney's office, Wardell arranged a $4,000 loan from the N. B. Cigarette Vending Co. in San Francisco in January 1971.

The company, which maintains cigarette machines at the prison, was to be paid back from the proceeds of the machines, money which ordinarily would have gone to the employee group.

But Wardell, the district attorney's office repeated, forged the name of the association president on the loan application, then pocketed the money instead of turning it over to the association.

A district attorney spokesman said an investigation is under way to determine if Wardell diverted other association funds to his own uses.

He has repaid most of the money he is thought to have taken, including all of the $4,000 loan, another source told the Independent-Journal.

The San Quentin Employees Mutual Benefit Association operates a restaurant for employees and services such as cleaning, shoe repair and barbering.

Fairfax Pair Facing Variety Of Charges

A Fairfax couple was arrested on suspicion of a variety of crimes Saturday following reports of gunfire on a Fairfax street, police said today.

Edward C. West, 18, of 780 Center Boulevard, Apt. 8, was booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of disturbing the peace, exhibiting a firearm, possessing a loaded firearm, firing a gun within city limits, altering the serial number of a firearm, and resisting arrest.

He was held in lieu of $2,500 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Margaret C. West, 18, of the same address, was arrested on suspicion of resisting arrest and held in lieu of $500 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police gave this account of events:

Officers responded to the West apartment at about 2 a.m. Saturday after a neighbor reported a man was firing a gun into the street from a balcony. The building was surrounded by units from the Fairfax, San Anselmo, San Rafael and sheriff's department.

Officers kicked in the door of the West apartment after Mrs. West refused them entry and found her huddled in a corner, but could find no trace of West.

West was later found hiding in a vacant apartment next door, and Mrs. West "clawed and kicked" officer Paul Simpson in a fray that preceded West's arrest.

Advisers On Marsh Suggested

Formation of a 13-member group to advise the Golden Gate Bridge District on its proposed recreation of a marsh on the Muzzi property has been urged by three conservation organizations.

District plans for the Larkspur ferry terminal call for dumping polluted dredged spoils on the Muzzi property on Corte Madera's bay shoreline. Conservationists have expressed fear the heavy metal pollution could leach back into the bay, and oppose district plans to use part of the property for transit and commercial purposes.

The advisory group was proposed by the Marin branch of the Sierra Club, Marin Conservation League and Marin Audubon Society.

They said it should include one councilman, planning commissioner and parks and recreation commissioner from both Larkspur and Corte Madera, one member each from the Corte Madera general plan committee and Larkspur Town Meeting, a bridge director, county supervisor and representatives from the three conservation organizations.

They made the proposal in a letter to district directors. It presumably will come before the board when it meets at 10 a.m. Friday in toll plaza offices.

Board To Discuss Daylight Savings

The San Rafael Board of Education will discuss the effect of daylight saving time on school schedules when it meets at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in Bahia Vista School, 125 Bahia Way.

The board will also consider a beautification project at Terra Linda High School.

Speed-Up In Planner Decisions Suggested

By FRANK FARRARA
(Third of eight articles on candidates for a seat on the Novato Planning Commission.)

Lewis E. Fredrickson, a 31-year-old civil engineer believes the Novato Planning Commission should take less time in making its decisions.

"It seems as if more could be done to expedite the meetings, move them along and give applicants speedier decisions, one way or the other," Fredrickson said.

An engineer with the Marin County Flood Control District, he said he is seeking a seat on the planning commission because he is interested "in the safe development of the community."

He describes himself as "a sort of law and order candidate in that I think there are city zoning codes that should be enforced. The planning commission should obey the law and regulations set down by the city council. They have a job to do and that is to follow the law."

Concerning proposed growth control limits, Fredrickson said he thinks "There should be some attempt at regulated growth as long as there isn't inverse condemnation of private property."

Zoning also, "should be such that it is inversely condemning property," he said.

He said the key to orderly development is conformity with the Novato area general plan. "I think if an area is legally zoned to handle certain types of business, all effort should be made to allow those businesses to come into being.

Fredrickson said the city will need more open space as it grows and "it should be acquired as the growth continues, within the (city's) financial limits."

The applicant is a native of San Rafael and has lived in Novato for 27 years. He is a graduate of the College of Marin and San Jose State College and attended Golden Gate Law School for two-and-one-half years. He is a member of the Marin Conservation League and the Commonwealth Club of California. He lives at 1000 Eighth Street.

Certificates For Lessons Available

The certificate will entitle the recipient to enroll in eight classes in either drawing or painting. The classes are for beginners or advanced students and meet on Wednesday and Thursday mornings at the Terra Linda Art Association Workshop, 4172 Redwood Highway.

Richmond Bridge Bus Permit Hearing Set

A permit to operate a small bus between San Rafael and Richmond will be the subject of a Public Utilities Commission hearing on Jan. 10 in San Rafael.

Commission examiner William S. Pilling will convene the session at 10 a.m. in the planning commission chambers of the Marin Civic Center.

David McGreevy of San Rafael and Kem Yim Louis of San Francisco, partners in Travelers Transit Co., have applied for a PUC certificate of public convenience and necessity to provide the service.

They want to run one 12-passenger coach Monday through Saturday from 5:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. between Greyhound stations in both cities. The run would connect to the Bay Area Rapid Transit District terminal in Richmond.

The bus would leave San Rafael on its first run at 5:30 a.m., and depart hourly on the half hour until 7:30 p.m. It would leave Richmond hourly on the hour from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Baggage service also would be provided.

Pilling decided to hold the hearing after objections were raised by the Golden Gate Bridge District, Marin County Transit District and Alameda-Contra Costa County Transit District. They have been working without result for two years to provide a transit link across the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

The bridge district is especially worried that it would have to buy out the private operator if it starts public transit over the route. Federal grants to the district require it to compensate private transit companies it displaces.

The route also would serve San Quentin Prison, and the Standard Oil of California complex and provide a connection to BART to reach the University of California and Kaiser Center, the last three destinations of a growing number of Marin commuters.

Novato Woman, 33, Hurt As Car Misses A Curve

A 33-year-old Novato woman was reported in satisfactory condition today at Novato General Hospital with injuries sustained in a one-car accident Saturday night.

A nurse at the hospital said she had no report on the extent of injuries suffered by Linda Lee Zimmer of 1386 Donna Street.

Officers said the accident occurred at 8 p.m. when her auto — traveling east — failed to make a curve on Novato Boulevard one mile west of San Marin Drive.

The auto rolled over at least once after crossing the center line, officers said, and came to rest in the westbound lane.

Council To Look At Plan Elements

The San Anselmo City Council will consider the open space and conservation elements of the city's emerging general plan when it meets at 8 p.m. tomorrow in city hall.

The council will also consider an appointment to the city library board.

Ray Of Hope In Sentencing Of Burglar

The sentence was for Prater's part in a $20,000 burglary at a Los Ranchitos home in June.

The hope came from Judge David Menary Jr. of Marin Superior Court, who said:

"You've got a lot going for you and you'll be eligible for parole in six months. I think you'll make it in time."

Menary sentenced Prater to one to 15 years as one of three men who broke into the William Ambrose home and carted off some $20,000 in silver and electronic equipment.

Prater has spent a total of nine years in prison on three convictions, his probation report shows.

He was convicted by a jury in Menary's court last month after an earlier trial ended in a hung jury.

An accomplice, Richard Anthony Weaver, 20, also of Oakland, was found guilty, declared a narcotics addict and sent to the California Medical Center at Vacaville.

A brother of Weaver, Larry Lee Weaver, 29, of Santa Cruz, was arrested Wednesday and faces a preliminary hearing tomorrow in municipal court.

Sheriff's deputies said he escaped the crime scene by ramming two vehicles blocking the Ambrose driveway and driving away in a loot-filled car.

Small Inn Wins British Award

It is among 98 British pubs commended by the authority for their food, accommodations, service and friendliness.

Strawberry Man Is Found Dead

The county coroner's office said that Leon Gagne of 50 Rancho Drive was found lying on his living room floor at about 6 p.m. Friday night.

He apparently died of natural causes, according to the coroner's office, and a routine autopsy is being done.

Neighbors had reported that he had not been seen for several days and that newspapers had been piling up outside his door.

Gagne, who had lived in the Strawberry area for about 15 years, operated a Bonsai nursery in his home.

Political Reform Seen On Ballot

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Supporters of a wide-ranging political reform initiative predict their proposal will easily qualify for the June 1974 ballot.

Ed Koupal of the People's Lobby said, "There's no question about it. We've got over a half million signatures."

The initiative needs 325,504 signatures to be placed on the ballot. Dec. 24 is the deadline to qualify the proposal for the June election.

The initiative would place limits on campaign spending, require more detailed reporting of the source of political campaign funds and virtually bar contributions by lobbyists.

In addition to the People's Lobby, the measure is backed by Common Cause and Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.

AMERICA AND THE FUTURE OF MAN

Warning On Criminal Sanction Overuse

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 12th of 20 essays by leading men in the world's academic community. The writer of this essay died recently and this is believed to be one of his last writings before death. He was Jackson Eli Reynolds professor of law at Stanford University. Herein he discusses the survival of law in a mass society.)

By HERBERT PACKER
Distributed by Copley News Service

HERBERT L. PACKER
Two basic attitudes

Today, the Rule of Law is under attack. Public regard for the law is said to be at a low ebb. In my view, this alleged disregard stems from two related factors: 1. People expect too much from the law and, 2. as a society, we are in a good deal of conflict about just what we want from the law.

I shall try to illuminate both of these themes, after a preliminary discussion of what the Rule Of Law means, and try to suggest a more realistic view of what the law can do and thereby to achieve a true regard for the Rule of Law.

The distinguished philospher John Rawls calls the Rule of Law "justice as regularity." It involves the following features: The legal system must not require people to do or to avoid conduct that they cannot reasonably be required to do or to avoid: there can be no offense against law without an existing law; the judicial process must operate fairly and evenhandedly; any legal system must require some form of due process.

The criminal sanction, the branch of the law that defines forbidden conduct through issuing commands and prescribes what shall be done with those people who are found guilty, through the processes established by law, most readily illustrates how the ideal of the Rule of Law is viewed by most people. The criminal sanction involves both substance — what kind of conduct is forbidden — and procedure — how the courts and other agencies of government proceed against a person accused of crime.

There is a good deal of current dispute, both in public and in the Supreme Court of the United States, about just how certain basic procedural requirements, like those embodied in the Bill of Rights, should be interpreted.

There are two basic attitudes, reflected in what I call two different models of the criminal process, that animate the tension that exists:

The Due Process model emphasizes the individual rights of persons who are accused of having committed crimes, and the Crime Control model emphasizes efficiency in repressing and preventing criminal conduct. The debate has occupied both political parties since the Miranda decision in 1966, which was said to have made it more difficult for the police to obtain and use confessions.

I believe that, notwithstanding the great differences over how the courts should interpret the Bill of Rights (including the great contemporary debates over confessions, searches and seizures and the death penalty) the main issues that affect how we look at the Rule of Law are not procedural but substantive. That is, they affect the behavior content of the criminal law. Substantive issues, what kind of conduct the law should make criminal, are both logically and practically anterior to the important procedural issues.

There are certain functions that almost everyone agrees the criminal law must maintain. The criminal law tells us not to intentionally, recklessly, or negligently kill another human being (with certain well-defined exceptions like self-defense); not to take another's property against his will; not to commit burglary, robbery, rape or arson. There is virtually unanimous agreement in our society that these commands are a Good Thing.

To that extent, almost everyone believes in the Rule of Law; no one wants the law of the jungle to take over. That being so, one should distinguish between mandatory and optional uses of the criminal sanction. By "mandatory" I refer to crimes like those listed in the above paragraph; by "optional" I refer to all other forms of conduct that we choose to treat as criminal.

The great 19th Century philosopher John Stuart Mill said: "The only purpose for which power can be rightfully exercised over any member of a civilized community, against his will, is to prevent harm to others."

Now, that statement does not by itself solve any problems. But it is a very useful starting point for distinguishing between "mandatory" and "optional" uses of the criminal sanction.

Now, turning to my principal theme, how can it be shown that Americans expect too much from the criminal law? We are as a people impatient, demanding of results and terribly moralistic. The "noble experiment" of Prohibition illustrates every element of my description.

If we don't like something, we tend to pass a law against it (thereby demonstrating our orientation toward quick and easy solutions to complicated social problems).

Our Puritan ethos, combined with our readiness to embrace the criminal law as an avenue to solving social problems, was very characteristic of Americans, both in the early 1920s and today. Yet Prohibition convinced many of us that it is very difficult to solve a serious social problem by passing a law.

The stubborn fact that people were unwilling to give up alcohol made Prohibition unenforceable.

Worse yet, attempts to enforce it brought about use of such procedural devices as unconstitutional searches and seizures and consequently the erosion of human liberty through government snooping that still plagues us. This is an historic example of what happens to ideals of human autonomy through overextension of the criminal law.

We should be very reserved about what uses we make of the criminal law aside from the "mandatory" crimes.

The moralistic spirit that moves Americans to make criminal so many "optional" forms of conduct has brought about many abuses that plague the Rule of Law.

The use of the criminal sanction, to be justified, must meet some minimal standards that are generated by the Rule of Law. Certain measures of "cost-benefit" ratio must be met by "optional" uses of the criminal sanction. They include:

1. The conduct is prominent in most people's view of socially threatening behavior, and is not condoned by any significant segment of society.

2. Subjecting it to the criminal sanction is not inconsistent with the goals of punishment.

3. Suppressing it will not inhibit socially desirable conduct.

4. It may be dealt with through evenhanded and nondiscriminatory enforcement.

5. Controlling it through the criminal process will not expose that process to severe qualitative or quantitative strains.

6. There are no reasonable alternatives to the criminal sanction for dealing with it.

Let us illustrate the application of these criteria (referring to the numbers used above) by discussing the contemporary drug problem.

Taking the least controversial aspect of that problem — marijuana — 1. I doubt very much whether selling, possessing and using marijuana is prominent in most people's view of socially threatening behavior, and a recent presidential commission has shown many people are convinced that the criminal law should not occupy this area.

2. If the goals of punishment are not primarily to exact vengeance but rather to prevent socially undesirable conduct, have these goals really been advanced by the use of the criminal sanction against marijuana?

3. However, most of us are still a long way from thinking that this application of the criminal sanction inhibits socially useful conduct. We are hardly in a position to congratulate ourselves on complying with this criterion.

4. So many people currently use marijuana that it is quite impossible for the police and prosecutors to be evenhanded and nondiscriminatory. If you are either black or young the chances of your being arrested on a marijuana charge are much greater than they are for, say, middle-class, middle-aged users.

5. Qualitative strains on the criminal process (like the indiscriminate use of illegal searches and seizures, preventive detention, electronic snooping devices or police decoys, pay-offs to the police by sellers of drugs) have been and are so much a part of the war on drugs, so much a part of the diminution of freedom for our citizens, that we are gradually losing the battle to retain our civil liberties. Quantitative strains (look at the overloaded calendars of our courts) are so much a part of what we have done to ourselves through these "optional" uses of the criminal sanction that one is simply aghast.

Finally, there is the last criterion.

6. Is there any reasonable alternative to using the criminal sanction against marijuana? Yes, we can simply take the criminal law out of this area, and decriminalize marijuana.

Decriminalization (a word that everyone needs to think about) involves leaving our morals to other institutions of our society — families, churches, schools, rather than to the criminal sanction.

There are many other "optional" uses of the criminal sanction: abortion, sexual deviation, prostitution, pornography, gambling, narcotics addiction — the list could be extended further. The use of the criminal sanction to repress everything that we most dislike about our environment condemns us to endure the nastiness that is the gist of "efficient" police and prosecutorial work. Also, it overburdens all the institutions of the criminal law (crowded courts, overloaded prisons).

Through our overuse of the criminal sanction we have placed ourselves in a situation that resembles some aspects of our foreign policy, in which our commitments outstrip our capacities. The consequence may well be that we risk the collapse of the Rule of Law.

ICING OPENER

West opened the king of diamonds when this hand came along in a recent tournament. Edgar Kaplan, famous New York expert, played the seven of diamonds from the South hand with nary a fumble.

West knew that his partner might have begun a signal with the six and three of diamonds, but thought it more likely that Kaplan had dropped the seven as a false card.

AVOIDED TRAP

Avoiding the trap, West shifted at the second trick to the king of clubs. Kaplan won with the ace of clubs, drew two rounds of trumps with the ace and king of spades and then casually led the ten of spades.

Here again the manner was important. Kaplan led the ten of spades without undue haste and without emphasis of any kind.

THINKS RUFF

West thought that declarer was going to ruff the ten of spades in dummy — exactly what he was intended to believe. Hence West discarded a low diamond, and there went the defense!

Kaplan discarded a club from dummy and next led the queen of spades to discard dummy's last club. West could ruff this trick, but he was too late to get a club trick. The defense was limited to two diamonds and one trump.

GOOD PLAY

The play was good, but the manner also had to be perfect. If West became suspicious, he would ruff the ten of spades and take a club as well as a second diamond trick. This would defeat the contract.

Today is Monday, Dec. 17, the 351st day of 1973 with 14 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

American poet John Greenleaf Whittier was born Dec. 17, 1807.

On this day in history:

In 1903, Orville and Wilbur Wright made the first successful airplane flights in history, soaring over the sand dunes near Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. One flight lasted 12 seconds and a second one was for 59 seconds.

In 1939, the Nazi warship Graf Spee was scuttled off the coast of Uruguay as British vessels hotly pursued it.

In 1972, astronaut Ronald Evans left the Apollo 17 spacecraft for a walk in space 185,000 miles from earth.

A thought for the day: Poet John Greenleaf Whittier said, "Search thine own heart. What paineth thee in others, in thyself may be."

AMERICA AND THE FUTURE OF MAN

Warning On Criminal Sanction Overuse

The writer of this essay died recently and this is believed to be one of his last writings before death. He was Jackson Eli Reynolds professor of law at Stanford University. HERBERT L. PACKER
Two basic attitudes

Today, the Rule of Law is under attack. Public regard for the law is said to be at a low ebb. In my view, this alleged disregard stems from two related factors: 1. People expect too much from the law and, 2. as a society, we are in a good deal of conflict about just what we want from the law.

I shall try to illuminate both of these themes, after a preliminary discussion of what the Rule Of Law means, and try to suggest a more realistic view of what the law can do and thereby to achieve a true regard for the Rule of Law.

The distinguished philospher John Rawls calls the Rule of Law "justice as regularity." It involves the following features: The legal system must not require people to do or to avoid conduct that they cannot reasonably be required to do or to avoid: there can be no offense against law without an existing law; the judicial process must operate fairly and evenhandedly; any legal system must require some form of due process.

The criminal sanction, the branch of the law that defines forbidden conduct through issuing commands and prescribes what shall be done with those people who are found guilty, through the processes established by law, most readily illustrates how the ideal of the Rule of Law is viewed by most people. The criminal sanction involves both substance — what kind of conduct is forbidden — and procedure — how the courts and other agencies of government proceed against a person accused of crime.

There is a good deal of current dispute, both in public and in the Supreme Court of the United States, about just how certain basic procedural requirements, like those embodied in the Bill of Rights, should be interpreted.

There are two basic attitudes, reflected in what I call two different models of the criminal process, that animate the tension that exists:

The Due Process model emphasizes the individual rights of persons who are accused of having committed crimes, and the Crime Control model emphasizes efficiency in repressing and preventing criminal conduct. The debate has occupied both political parties since the Miranda decision in 1966, which was said to have made it more difficult for the police to obtain and use confessions.

I believe that, notwithstanding the great differences over how the courts should interpret the Bill of Rights (including the great contemporary debates over confessions, searches and seizures and the death penalty) the main issues that affect how we look at the Rule of Law are not procedural but substantive. That is, they affect the behavior content of the criminal law. Substantive issues, what kind of conduct the law should make criminal, are both logically and practically anterior to the important procedural issues.

There are certain functions that almost everyone agrees the criminal law must maintain. The criminal law tells us not to intentionally, recklessly, or negligently kill another human being (with certain well-defined exceptions like self-defense); not to take another's property against his will; not to commit burglary, robbery, rape or arson. There is virtually unanimous agreement in our society that these commands are a Good Thing.

To that extent, almost everyone believes in the Rule of Law; no one wants the law of the jungle to take over. That being so, one should distinguish between mandatory and optional uses of the criminal sanction. By "mandatory" I refer to crimes like those listed in the above paragraph; by "optional" I refer to all other forms of conduct that we choose to treat as criminal.

The great 19th Century philosopher John Stuart Mill said: "The only purpose for which power can be rightfully exercised over any member of a civilized community, against his will, is to prevent harm to others."

Now, that statement does not by itself solve any problems. But it is a very useful starting point for distinguishing between "mandatory" and "optional" uses of the criminal sanction.

Now, turning to my principal theme, how can it be shown that Americans expect too much from the criminal law? We are as a people impatient, demanding of results and terribly moralistic. The "noble experiment" of Prohibition illustrates every element of my description.

If we don't like something, we tend to pass a law against it (thereby demonstrating our orientation toward quick and easy solutions to complicated social problems).

Our Puritan ethos, combined with our readiness to embrace the criminal law as an avenue to solving social problems, was very characteristic of Americans, both in the early 1920s and today. Yet Prohibition convinced many of us that it is very difficult to solve a serious social problem by passing a law.

The stubborn fact that people were unwilling to give up alcohol made Prohibition unenforceable.

Worse yet, attempts to enforce it brought about use of such procedural devices as unconstitutional searches and seizures and consequently the erosion of human liberty through government snooping that still plagues us. This is an historic example of what happens to ideals of human autonomy through overextension of the criminal law.

We should be very reserved about what uses we make of the criminal law aside from the "mandatory" crimes.

The moralistic spirit that moves Americans to make criminal so many "optional" forms of conduct has brought about many abuses that plague the Rule of Law.

The use of the criminal sanction, to be justified, must meet some minimal standards that are generated by the Rule of Law. Certain measures of "cost-benefit" ratio must be met by "optional" uses of the criminal sanction. They include:

1. The conduct is prominent in most people's view of socially threatening behavior, and is not condoned by any significant segment of society.

2. Subjecting it to the criminal sanction is not inconsistent with the goals of punishment.

3. Suppressing it will not inhibit socially desirable conduct.

4. It may be dealt with through evenhanded and nondiscriminatory enforcement.

5. Controlling it through the criminal process will not expose that process to severe qualitative or quantitative strains.

6. There are no reasonable alternatives to the criminal sanction for dealing with it.

Let us illustrate the application of these criteria (referring to the numbers used above) by discussing the contemporary drug problem.

Taking the least controversial aspect of that problem — marijuana — 1. I doubt very much whether selling, possessing and using marijuana is prominent in most people's view of socially threatening behavior, and a recent presidential commission has shown many people are convinced that the criminal law should not occupy this area.

2. If the goals of punishment are not primarily to exact vengeance but rather to prevent socially undesirable conduct, have these goals really been advanced by the use of the criminal sanction against marijuana?

3. However, most of us are still a long way from thinking that this application of the criminal sanction inhibits socially useful conduct. We are hardly in a position to congratulate ourselves on complying with this criterion.

4. So many people currently use marijuana that it is quite impossible for the police and prosecutors to be evenhanded and nondiscriminatory. If you are either black or young the chances of your being arrested on a marijuana charge are much greater than they are for, say, middle-class, middle-aged users.

5. Qualitative strains on the criminal process (like the indiscriminate use of illegal searches and seizures, preventive detention, electronic snooping devices or police decoys, pay-offs to the police by sellers of drugs) have been and are so much a part of the war on drugs, so much a part of the diminution of freedom for our citizens, that we are gradually losing the battle to retain our civil liberties. Quantitative strains (look at the overloaded calendars of our courts) are so much a part of what we have done to ourselves through these "optional" uses of the criminal sanction that one is simply aghast.

Finally, there is the last criterion.

6. Is there any reasonable alternative to using the criminal sanction against marijuana? Yes, we can simply take the criminal law out of this area, and decriminalize marijuana.

Decriminalization (a word that everyone needs to think about) involves leaving our morals to other institutions of our society — families, churches, schools, rather than to the criminal sanction.

There are many other "optional" uses of the criminal sanction: abortion, sexual deviation, prostitution, pornography, gambling, narcotics addiction — the list could be extended further. New Microsurgical Procedure Used In Removal Of Cataracts

When the lens of the eye becomes opaque and a cataract forms, surgery is advised when practical vision is lost. A new microsurgical procedure (phacoemulsification) was developed in 1967 by Dr. Charles D. Kelman, a New York City ophthalmologist. Since then, 300 surgeons have used the technique on more than 7,000 eyes and it compares favorably with the other two methods now used to extract cataracts.

AN ULTRASONIC probe is now inserted into the lens mass. The hollow titanium tip vibrates 40,000 times a second and breaks up the nucleus of the lens with in 10 to 15 minutes. The fragments are then washed out with a special aspirator leaving in place the back capsule of the lens. A single suture closes the incision and the individual can go home or back to work.

Phacoemulsification has its limitations and is not recommended when certain eye conditions coexist. Complications also have been reported, but the poor visual results diminish in number as the surgeon's experience increases. It has been estimated that 90 per cent of those needing cataract extraction may be treated with phacoemulsification.

SPECIAL TRAINING is needed to use the ultrasound machine which costs about $25,000. More than 60 are now in use. No one has claimed yet that phacoemulsification is safer or better than the standard intracapsular cataract extraction, a procedure which is done some 400,000 times a year in the United States. This technique requires a larger incision because the lens is removed in one piece. A special capsule forceps removes the lens. In another method, the lens is frozen and removed with a cryosurgical probe.

But the size of the incision is not so important. As one ophthalmologist remarked, he would rather have the surgeon spend 15 minutes suturing the outside of the eye than 15 minutes inside, breaking up the cataracts.

FRACTURE REPAIR

Mrs. J. S. writes: What is meant by closed and open reduction of a fracture of a leg?

REPLY

Some fractures can be set by pulling and manipulating the fractured parts (closed). Others require an operation to put the bone into position under direct observation (open). It may be necessary to insert a metal pin or plate to keep the broken ends together.

Hays said the plastics industry representatives should "get together and raise cain in Washington."

Hays said the representatives should flood the House Ways and Means Committee, Rongress and the White House with mail telling government officials they are going out of business.

Energy Crisis Is Said Staged

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio (UPI) — The current energy crisis "is a lot of baloney contrived to drive up prices," U.S. Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, told 150 representatives of the Organization of Plastics Processors (OPP) meeting here Saturday.

Hays said the plastics industry representatives should "get together and raise cain in Washington."

Hays said the representatives should flood the House Ways and Means Committee, Rongress and the White House with mail telling government officials they are going out of business.

(UPI Telephoto)

Eight Killed As Aircraft Falls In Residential Area

MIAMI (AP) — "I had just reached for my nightgown when it sounded as if the whole world exploded," said a resident of the area where a giant cargo plane crashed, killing eight persons.

Eva Thomas, 59, said she was getting ready for bed when the four-engine Lockheed Constellation slammed into the ground across the street.

"I looked out and saw a solid sheet of fire," she said.

The airplane, bound for Venezuela with 21,000 pounds of Christmas trees, crashed seconds after takeoff Saturday night.

The dead included the three crewmen and three members of a family that fled Cuba four years ago.

A recording of the crew's conversation with Miami International Airport gave no indication of the impending crash, officials said, although it did show that the takeoff was delayed 20 minutes while the crew worked on a plane door that would not close properly.

There also were reports the plane took off without receiving requested maintenance work.

Police identified the crewmen as pilot William Fox, 48, of Sacramento, copilot Jesse Flanders, 30, and flight engineer Arthur Kimball, 59, both of Miami.

Vincente's father, Manuel Iglesias, 83, was listed in critical condition with burns over 80 per cent of his body.

Manuel Querol, 63, and his wife Barbara, 60, also were killed when fire from the wreckage engulfed their home. Police said the two apparently tried to flee from the flames by running into a utility closet.

Body Of Woman Found On Boat

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Coast Guard yesterday found the body of a Milpitas woman in the cabin of an overturned trimaran about five miles west of the Golden Gate.

The Coast Guard said the body of Deborah Haney, 19, was located about 24 hours after her sailing companion, Dale Schlegel, about 30, of Alviso, was rescued by a helicopter.

The couple had planned to sail the homemade vessel Eldorado to Mexico.

The 28-foot boat capsized Friday. The helicopter spotted Schlegel clinging to the hull and pulled him to safety. However, the boat was lost in the darkness.

Limits Proposed On Presidency

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Journalist I. F. Stone told the American Civil Liberties Union yesterday the Constitution should be changed to reduce the power of the presidency.

Speaking at a 182nd anniversary celebration for the Bill of Rights, he said Watergate "involves both the character of President Nixon and the institution of the presidency."

He declared Watergate proves the presidency as an institution is "simply too powerful for the bounds of our civil liberties."

Pittsburgh Next For Champ Raiders

Cheaper by the dozen. Number 12. It seemed that number popped up every time I turned around over the weekend. It would have been a great time to bet on the No. 12 horse, if you're a hunch bettor.

Saturday at Candlestick Park there were 12s throughout the stands as hundreds of fans had the number taped on the back of jackets or stenciled on jerseys to help celebrate John Brodie day. I even saw a man dressed in a Santa Claus suit, and when he turned around there it was, No. 12 on his back.

Then came the football game, John Brodie wearing his No. 12 for the last time, opposing the Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback with 12 on his jersey, Terry Bradshaw.

THE SAME THING happened yesterday at the Oakland Coliseum. My head already dizzy with 12s, dozens and dozens of them, I looked down on the field and there they were. On the field for the Raiders was their starting quarterback, Ken Stabler, and for the Denver Broncos their starting quarterback, Charley Johnson. Yes, they each had that same number splashed all over their uniforms — a one and a two. Gads!

The way things turned out, of the four No. 12 quarterbacks who started in the two Bay Area games, only one was there at the finish, and his team was the only one to win a divisional title.

The most famous of the weekend's 12s, 17-year veteran Brodie, had to take himself out of the game against the Steelers because of a sore arm and so he couldn't go all the way as planned. It's too bad. When he left, the game was tied 7-7. After Steve Spurrier and Joe Reed had their turns, the Niners had lost, 37-14.

PITTSBURGH'S NO. 12, Bradshaw, was hurt on the last play of the third quarter and backup man Joe Gilliam had to finish up the game. But by then the Steelers had all but won the game.

Yesterday in Oakland it was early in the fourth quarter when Denver's No. 12 became the third man of that number forced to leave the field. Johnson, a veteran of 13 seasons, was smacked soundly by Raider defensive end Tony Cline while trying to throw a pass and was knocked dizzy. Steve Ramsey finished the game for the Broncos.

But Oakland's No. 12, the man nicknamed the "Snake," stood tall and finished the job he started, a 21-17 victory over the Broncos. Now the Raiders, division titlists for the sixth time in the last seven years, get to host the Steelers in the first round of the American Football Conference playoffs Saturday.

YESTERDAY'S DRESSING room scene on the Oakland side of the coliseum was all happiness, although the celebration drink of the day was cola. There is no champagne celebration for winning the American Football Conference Western Division title. Coach John Madden wouldn't like to have a bunch of hung over players show up for today's practice. The champagne would come later, if the Raiders were to win the two playoff games and then the Super Bowl.

The Raiders were proud of their strong season finish. "We had to win those last four games to win the title, and we went out and did it," said Stabler.

Defensive tackle Art Thoms was honest about the fact that the Raiders are getting close to the big money of pro football. "We all love football, but let's face it — we're here for the money. I don't think about the money during the game, but I think about it before and after."

Stabler wants to prove wrong the Raider criticism that the team can't win the big one. He'll tell you that he wasn't the quarterback when the Raiders lost the big ones. "And I'm not used to losing. I only lost once in high school and three times in college (Alabama)," said Ken.

ABOUT DENVER'S attempt to run from punt formation on the Broncos' 49, fourth and 10, Madden said the Raiders weren't surprised. That's probably why the gamble failed, leading to Oakland's victory clinching touchdown. Madden said Denver coach John Ralston "always uses surprise plays in big games, just as he did when he was at Stanford."

Said Madden: "Denver gets credit for being a good, tough team, but we get credit for being champions of the division. Now we have to start thinking about Pittsburgh."

I'll give you a tip for that Raider-Steeler game. Bet on the team that starts No. 12 at quarterback.

OAKLAND (UPI) — "The way football is played now," Al Davis was saying, "you have to wait for a break and then jump on it."

This was an hour or so before yesterday's Oakland Raiders-Denver Broncos matchup for the American Football Conference West title and the right to play the Pittsburgh Steelers in the first round of the conference playoffs.

Davis' Raiders played mistake-free football for three quarters yesterday, built up a 14- 10 lead and then the big break came —a fake punt by the Broncos that misfired at midfield.

Three plays later, Ken Stabler threw 31 yards to Mike Siani for the touchdown that wound up the margin of difference as the Raiders edged the Broncos, 21-17, to win the division title for the sixth time in the last seven years.

The Raiders scored earlier on a one-yard smash by Charlie Smith and an eight yard run up the middle by Clarence Davis and combined with Stabler's TD throw to Siani, eked out just enough points to win.

"We've been in six playoffs the last seven years," said Oakland coach John Madden, "but this was the toughest one to get into. We lost to Pittsburgh and Cleveland and needed to win four in-a-row to get into the playoffs, and we did it.

"Now, we have to play Pittsburgh again. It'll be a short week, inasmuch as the game against the Steelers comes on Saturday, but we know what we have to do. We lost to the Steelers in the Playoffs last year on a freak play and we got beat by them on a bad field earlier this year. There is little about them we don't know. Maybe the third time is the charm and we will beat them."

The Steelers, who whipped the San Francisco 49ers, 37-14, Saturday, go to Palm Springs, Calif., today to get ready for the Raiders. They got into the Playoffs as the AFC wild card entry after finishing second to the Cincinnati Bengals, who play Miami, in the AFC Central.

On the Denver fake punt play that turned yesterday's game into Oakland's favor, Broncos coach John Ralston said he would do it all over again in the same situation.

Here's the picture: The Broncos, trailing by 14-10, were at their own 49 on fourth and 10. Running back Joe Dawkins was supposed to take a snap from center Bobby Maples and hand it between his legs to running mate Otis Armstrong, who in turn was supposed to go right.

"Poor execution hurt us," said Ralston. "We had a poor snap from center, Dawkins forgot to give the ball to Armstrong and then ran left instead of right. If Dawkins gets the ball to Armstrong, he'd still be running. There was a hole on the right side big enough for a truck to go through."

Drake Center Trimble Leads Win Over San Rafael, 65-51

By LEW CODDINGTON

Doing the heavy work under the backboards can be tedious and bone-jarring, but it has its rewards, Dan Trimble discovered Saturday night.

Trimble, a 6-foot-4 senior center for Drake High School, was named the most valuable player as his teammates captured the championship of the Drake Pirate Classic basketball tournament with a 65-51 victory over San Rafael.

Trimble scored 14 points, grabbed eight rebounds and blunted the effectiveness of San Rafael's star center, Byron Stewart, in his third consecutive strong game. About 1,200 fans watched.

Novato High pulled away from San Marin in the fourth quarter to capture third place with a 57-49 victory, while Ells of Richmond won the consolation title with a 74-64 triumph over Terra Linda and Petaluma took seventh place by beating Napa, 64-43.

"We wouldn't be here without Dan Trimble," said elated Drake coach Pete Hayward after the game, clutching his second consecutive tournament championship trophy in his two years of coaching the team.

"He may not have the physical tools —he may not stand 6-7 or be able to pick a ball off the top of the backboard —but he plays with the guys who do," Hayward said.

Trimble's steadiness was augmented by the spectacular play of guard Eddie Joe Chavez, who scored 23 points in the second and third quarters as Drake stretched a 10-9 lead to a 54-40 advantage. Chavez did not play the first quarter following a disagreement with Hayward.

The other two members of Drake's front line — Andre Carson and Gary Peak — joined Trimble and Chavez on the all-tournament team. Also chosen were San Rafael's Stewart, Arthur Brooks and Steve D'Ambra; Novato's Willie Barnes and Curtis Saine; San Marin's Terry Kom and Ells' Willie Washington.

Stewart nestled his short, soft shots into the net for 27 points, 21 of them in the second half. Led by Trimble, Drake shut off the 6-7 senior in the first half by collapsing on him, and San Rafael's efforts to get the ball inside often resulted in loose balls and Drake fast breaks.

"We didn't shoot and we didn't rebound," said San Rafael coach Bret Tovani. Though Stewart had 13 rebounds, the Bulldogs were outboarded by Drake, 32-18, and managed only two offensive rebounds in the game.

Drake shot 49 per cent (24 of 49) and San Rafael 46 per cent (21 of 46). "We missed some easy ones, especially early," said Tovani.

Novato (5-1) led San Marin by only a point early in the fourth quarter, but Saine and Mike Moroski went to work during a 22-12 outburst which clinched the victory.

Saine scored 10 points in the fourth quarter to finish with 14, and grabbed rebounds and dealt out assists as well. Moroski sank six free throws and a field goal — his entire night's output — in the period.

Barnes added 14 for Novato. Kom had 14 for San Marin (4-4), which lost guard Bruce Smith to an ankle injury in the first half.

Ells (4-2) trailed Terra Linda at halftime, 36-27, but Washington scored 18 of his 23 points in the second half and Willis Alcutt added another 10. Doug Carlisle's 21 points were high for the Trojans (3-4).

Petaluma (5-2), which entered the tournament undefeated, recouped a bit by pummeling Napa, with Dan Aldridge scoring 15 and the Mungle brothers, Gary and Kriss, combing for 23. Mat Moon led Napa with 13.

Marin Tars Defeat Rival: 9th In Row

By TOM THOMPSON

Five players on College of Marin's basketball team (9-0) scored in double figures Saturday night to lead the Tars to a 77-62 non-conference victory over Reedley College in the finale of the College of Marin Invitational. In an earlier game Saturday in the Tars' Kentfield gym, Santa Rosa Junior College edged Moffett Field naval air station of Mountain View, 83-77. Both Marin and Santa Rosa ended the invitational without a loss, while Reedley and Moffett went 0-2 over the weekend in the double-header event.

Marin's Bill Donnellan led game scorers with 16 points, while Jared McFarren and Harry Norman had 14 each, Leonard Smith, 12, and in his lowest scoring output of the year, the Tars' point leader Wil Garner finished with 10. Calvin Young was high for Reedley with 15.

In contrast to Marin's Friday night's 104-50 thumping of Moffett, the Reedley game lent some excitement to the 800 fans on hand. The Pirates came back from an 86-60 loss to Santa Rosa to give the Tars a tough fight in the first half.

Reedley jumped out to an early 8-4 lead, went cold, and saw the margin slip away and Marin go ahead, 12-10. The Tars stretched that lead to as much as nine but Reedley fought back to tie it up at 34-34 just before

The National Football League mathematical whizzes now can forget about playoff probabilites and possibilites and concentrate on inscribing O.J. Simpson's name into the record books.

The NFL finally sorted out its five remaining playoff berths on the final weekend of play and Simpson ended all question concerning his run at the NFL single-season rushing record by absolutely obliterating it and becoming the first player in NFL history to surpass 2,000 yards in a season.

In the American Football Conference, Miami, which wrapped up the East long ago, ended its season Saturday with a 34-7 rout of Detroit. The Dolphins will play host Sunday to Cincinnati, which had to battle to defeat Houston 27-24 and capture the Central title.

Oakland won the Western championship by holding off Denver 21-17 and will host Pittsburgh, which clinched a wild card berth Saturday by bombing San Francisco 37-14, in opening round playoff action Saturday. Cincinnati and Pittsburgh tied with 10-4 records but Cincinnati gained the title with a better conference record.

In the National Football Conference, Minnesota, the first club to clinch a title, finished up 12-12 by ripping the New York Giants 31-7. The Vikings will entertain Washington, the wild card team after downing Philadelphia 38- 20, while Dallas, which won the NFC East by clubbing St. Louis 30-3, hosts Los Angeles, a 30-17 winner over Cleveland Sunday.

A Weekend For No. 12s

Pittsburgh Next For Champ Raiders

Cheaper by the dozen. Number 12. It seemed that number popped up every time I turned around over the weekend. It would have been a great time to bet on the No. 12 horse, if you're a hunch bettor.

Saturday at Candlestick Park there were 12s throughout the stands as hundreds of fans had the number taped on the back of jackets or stenciled on jerseys to help celebrate John Brodie day. I even saw a man dressed in a Santa Claus suit, and when he turned around there it was, No. 12 on his back.

Then came the football game, John Brodie wearing his No. 12 for the last time, opposing the Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback with 12 on his jersey, Terry Bradshaw.

THE SAME THING happened yesterday at the Oakland Coliseum. My head already dizzy with 12s, dozens and dozens of them, I looked down on the field and there they were. On the field for the Raiders was their starting quarterback, Ken Stabler, and for the Denver Broncos their starting quarterback, Charley Johnson. Yes, they each had that same number splashed all over their uniforms — a one and a two. Gads!

The way things turned out, of the four No. 12 quarterbacks who started in the two Bay Area games, only one was there at the finish, and his team was the only one to win a divisional title.

The most famous of the weekend's 12s, 17-year veteran Brodie, had to take himself out of the game against the Steelers because of a sore arm and so he couldn't go all the way as planned. It's too bad. When he left, the game was tied 7-7. After Steve Spurrier and Joe Reed had their turns, the Niners had lost, 37-14.

PITTSBURGH'S NO. 12, Bradshaw, was hurt on the last play of the third quarter and backup man Joe Gilliam had to finish up the game. But by then the Steelers had all but won the game.

Yesterday in Oakland it was early in the fourth quarter when Denver's No. 12 became the third man of that number forced to leave the field. Johnson, a veteran of 13 seasons, was smacked soundly by Raider defensive end Tony Cline while trying to throw a pass and was knocked dizzy. Steve Ramsey finished the game for the Broncos.

But Oakland's No. 12, the man nicknamed the "Snake," stood tall and finished the job he started, a 21-17 victory over the Broncos. Now the Raiders, division titlists for the sixth time in the last seven years, get to host the Steelers in the first round of the American Football Conference playoffs Saturday.

YESTERDAY'S DRESSING room scene on the Oakland side of the coliseum was all happiness, although the celebration drink of the day was cola. There is no champagne celebration for winning the American Football Conference Western Division title. Coach John Madden wouldn't like to have a bunch of hung over players show up for today's practice. The champagne would come later, if the Raiders were to win the two playoff games and then the Super Bowl.

The Raiders were proud of their strong season finish. "We had to win those last four games to win the title, and we went out and did it," said Stabler.

Defensive tackle Art Thoms was honest about the fact that the Raiders are getting close to the big money of pro football. "We all love football, but let's face it — we're here for the money. I don't think about the money during the game, but I think about it before and after."

Stabler wants to prove wrong the Raider criticism that the team can't win the big one. He'll tell you that he wasn't the quarterback when the Raiders lost the big ones. "And I'm not used to losing. I only lost once in high school and three times in college (Alabama)," said Ken.

ABOUT DENVER'S attempt to run from punt formation on the Broncos' 49, fourth and 10, Madden said the Raiders weren't surprised. That's probably why the gamble failed, leading to Oakland's victory clinching touchdown. Madden said Denver coach John Ralston "always uses surprise plays in big games, just as he did when he was at Stanford."

Said Madden: "Denver gets credit for being a good, tough team, but we get credit for being champions of the division. Now we have to start thinking about Pittsburgh."

I'll give you a tip for that Raider-Steeler game. Bet on the team that starts No. 12 at quarterback.

OAKLAND (UPI) — "The way football is played now," Al Davis was saying, "you have to wait for a break and then jump on it."

This was an hour or so before yesterday's Oakland Raiders-Denver Broncos matchup for the American Football Conference West title and the right to play the Pittsburgh Steelers in the first round of the conference playoffs.

Davis' Raiders played mistake-free football for three quarters yesterday, built up a 14- 10 lead and then the big break came —a fake punt by the Broncos that misfired at midfield.

Three plays later, Ken Stabler threw 31 yards to Mike Siani for the touchdown that wound up the margin of difference as the Raiders edged the Broncos, 21-17, to win the division title for the sixth time in the last seven years.

The Raiders scored earlier on a one-yard smash by Charlie Smith and an eight yard run up the middle by Clarence Davis and combined with Stabler's TD throw to Siani, eked out just enough points to win.

"We've been in six playoffs the last seven years," said Oakland coach John Madden, "but this was the toughest one to get into. We lost to Pittsburgh and Cleveland and needed to win four in-a-row to get into the playoffs, and we did it.

"Now, we have to play Pittsburgh again. It'll be a short week, inasmuch as the game against the Steelers comes on Saturday, but we know what we have to do. We lost to the Steelers in the Playoffs last year on a freak play and we got beat by them on a bad field earlier this year. There is little about them we don't know. Maybe the third time is the charm and we will beat them."

The Steelers, who whipped the San Francisco 49ers, 37-14, Saturday, go to Palm Springs, Calif., today to get ready for the Raiders. They got into the Playoffs as the AFC wild card entry after finishing second to the Cincinnati Bengals, who play Miami, in the AFC Central.

On the Denver fake punt play that turned yesterday's game into Oakland's favor, Broncos coach John Ralston said he would do it all over again in the same situation.

Here's the picture: The Broncos, trailing by 14-10, were at their own 49 on fourth and 10. Running back Joe Dawkins was supposed to take a snap from center Bobby Maples and hand it between his legs to running mate Otis Armstrong, who in turn was supposed to go right.

"Poor execution hurt us," said Ralston. "We had a poor snap from center, Dawkins forgot to give the ball to Armstrong and then ran left instead of right. If Dawkins gets the ball to Armstrong, he'd still be running. There was a hole on the right side big enough for a truck to go through."

49er Players' Status Is Unknown

More than likely, it also is the first day of retirement for defensive tackle Charlie Krueger and offensive tackle Len Rhode.

And before next training camp rolls around in July, there could be a dozen other members of the current San Francisco 49ers squad playing somewhere else.

The 49ers, plagued by quarterback and running problems all season long, bowed to the Pittsburgh Steelers, 37-14, Saturday to wind up a 5-9 year — their worst since 1969, which was coach Dick Nolan's second season in a rebuilding program.

Nolan, despite this year's fall from division titles in 1970-71-72, is safe and should be back for his sixth season as head man next year. But one thing seems certain, the club will have to deal for an experienced quarterback and pick up at least two running backs in the National Football League draft next month.

With Brodie in retirement, the club is left with Steve Spurrier, a seven-year veteran who hasn't impressed the 49ers, and young Joe Reed, who probably is a couple of years away from being a dependable regular.

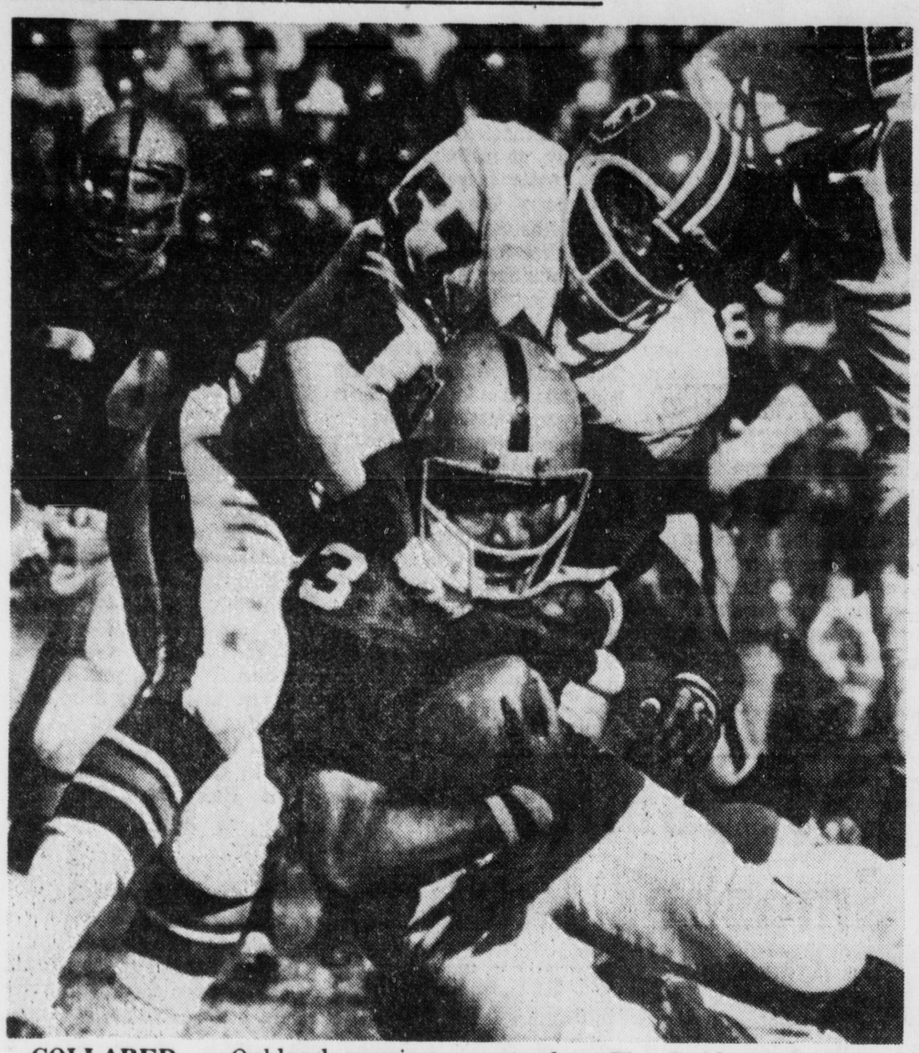
Jim Plunkett, Joe Namath and Dan Pastorini are experienced quarterbacks believed to be avilable in the trading marts and the 49ers, while not admitting as much publicly, would like to have any of the three if a trade can be worked out.

With the two first round draft choices San Francisco is in position to do some trading and failing that, pick up at least one star running back and quarterback in the first round of the draft.

"We are going to have to do a lot of studying in the next month," said one 49ers official. "It's obvious what our weaknesses are, but it might not be all that easy to plug them."

Brodie left early in the second quarter of Saturday's season-ending loss to Pittsburgh with a sore throwing arm, and thus went into retirement as only one of four quarterbacks in history to pass for more than 31,000. Officially over 17 years, he completed 2,463 passes in 4,479 attempts for 31,548 yards and a 55 per cent completion average.

On the San Francisco side, Mel Phillips came out of Saturday's game with a broken arm and Jimmy Thomas dislocated a shoulder. Safety Phillips got good news before the game, that he was the winner of the 49ers' annual Len Eshmont Award for inspirational leadership.



COLLARED — Oakland running back Charlie Smith (23) was wrestled to the Oakland Coliseum ground by Denver linebacker Tom Jackson (57) following a two-yard gain in the first period yesterday. The Raiders went on to clinch the championship of the American Football Conference's West division with a 21-17 victory over the visiting Broncos.

UCLA Faces 2 Unheralded Foes

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Now that streaking UCLA has dispatched second-ranked North Carolina State, it can turn its attention to a couple of less heralded opponents this week— Ohio University and St. Bonaventure—before getting ready to host its own Holiday Classic.

The awesome Bruins, getting help from Keith Wilkes while All America Bill Walton sat on the bench with four early fouls, came on to overwhelm North Carolina State, 84-66, and now it's winning streak stands at 79. There's a good chance it'll be 81 after this week.

In its own tournament next week, UCLA faces Michigan, slump-ridden San Francisco and Wyoming. The Bruins open the Pacific 8 Conference scheduled Jan. 5 against Washington.

North Carolina State carried a 29-game winning streak into its tussle with UCLA at St. Louis Saturday and made an early game of it, mostly because Walton left after only eight minutes with four fouls. Wilkes, though, emerged from Walton's shadow to keep the Bruins in contention and then Walton returned with 10 minutes to go and blew the game out of North Carolina State's reach.

Wilkes wound up with 27 points in addition to holding David Thompson to 17 points and earned the praises of coach John Wooden, who called him "truly an All America."

Walton, who led the cheers from the bench and then refused to talk with newsmen later in the clubhouse, scored 11 points.

"They just plain beat us," said a saddened coach Norm Sloan of N.C. State. "I hope we are better than this. Maybe we aren't, but I think we are."

While UCLA was in the center of the spotlight, crosstown rival Southern California bopped Arizona State, 79-70, and now is 4-1, and Stanford whipped Colorado State, 56-45, for a 2-1 record.

California lost to Loyola of the WCAC, 75-67, Oregon State was beaten by Nevada-Las Vegas, another WCAC school, 74-59; Oregon lost to Kansas, 67-49 in the final of the Jayhawk Classic, and WSU bowed to Princeton, 63-60 in two overtimes in the Jayhawk consolation game.

USF, a complete mystery to its coach and fans, dropped its fourth in a row after a season-opening victory over San Diego —this time bowing to Seton Hall, 89-83.

Nevada-Reno kept pace by beating Portland, 81-73, while Pepperdine bowed to (6-1) Pacific, 70-63.

Fresno State ran its record to 6-0 by whipping Wyoming, 75-66; Long Beach, now 5-1, downed Long Island University, 60-46; San Jose State went to 5-1 by beating North Dakota, 61-60, and Los Angeles State picked up its fourth victory in seven games with a 65-61 decision over Bakersfield.

BARTOSH TO COACH EL PASO

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Gil Bartosh has resigned his position as assistant football coach at Texas A&M University to accept the head coaching position at Texas-El Paso, it was learned today.

Bartosh, 43, replaces Tommy Hudspeth, who stepped down after failing to produce a victory in 15 games. The 1973 Miners were 0-11. Hudspeth's 1972 record was 0-4 after taking over in midseason.

Bartosh went to Texas A&M last April after coaching Odessa Permian High School to the 1972 four A state championship.

A&M head coach Emory Bellard said he regretted losing Bartosh to the Miners of the Western Athletic Conference.

Elsewhere, Baltimore downed New England 18-13, Kansas City trounced San Diego 33-6, Green Bay shut out Chicago 21-0 and Atlanta edged New Orleans 14-10.

Simpson broke Brown's record on his eighth carry of the day and went over the 2,000-yard mark with 5:56 left to play. He scored on a 13-yard run and rookie Bill Cahill returned a punt 51 yards for another score 48 seconds later to break open the game. "This is just unbelievable," said Simpson, who broke the record on an icy, snow-covered field. "We've worked hard all year and we're just glad it worked out so well. We're the youngest team in pro football and our future looks great.

"It's been a tough week. People have been calling me all week asking me about the record and it was hard to keep it out of my mind. I just tried to concentrate on the ballgame. At first I thought the field might slow me down but as it turned out, there was no problem."

"It hasn't hit me yet, but I guess it will when I get home. It's just so hard to believe."

The Bills also set a league record for team rushing yardage, going over the 3,000 mark for the season. Joe Namath had two TD passes for the Jets.

Ken Anderson threw TD passes of 77 and 67 yards to rookie Isaac Curtis and 10 yards to Bob Trumpy as Cincinnati held off determined Houston. The Bengals led 27-10 but had to survive a two-TD scare in the last quarter by the Oilers, who finished at 1-13, the worst record in the NFL.

Roger Staubach threw for 256 yards and three TDs as Dallas overwhelmed St. Louis. Two TD passes went to rookie Drew Pearson and the third to Jean Fugett.

Bill Kilmer threw four TD passes, three of them to Larry Brown, to lead Washington over Philadelphia.

More Than 1 Million No-Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 1 million ticketholders stayed away from National Football League games this season, the first under the lifting of the television blackout, a league spokesman sais last night.

This final weekend of the season had an estimated 190,000 no-shows, according to the NFL.

The highest number of no-shows this season occurred at Kansas City Sunday where 35,793 ticketholders did not turn out in 20-degree weather to watch the hometown Chiefs and San Diego Chargers. Both teams were out of the running for playoff berths.

More than 20,000 no-shows were reported at Miami, Chicago and Atlanta this weekend. An estimated 20,000 stayed away from the Minnesota-New York Giants game at New Haven, Conn.

The spokesman said the no-show figure for the season represented 10 per cent of all season tickets sold.

49er Players' Status Is Unknown

More than likely, it also is the first day of retirement for defensive tackle Charlie Krueger and offensive tackle Len Rhode.

And before next training camp rolls around in July, there could be a dozen other members of the current San Francisco 49ers squad playing somewhere else.

The 49ers, plagued by quarterback and running problems all season long, bowed to the Pittsburgh Steelers, 37-14, Saturday to wind up a 5-9 year — their worst since 1969, which was coach Dick Nolan's second season in a rebuilding program.

Nolan, despite this year's fall from division titles in 1970-71-72, is safe and should be back for his sixth season as head man next year. But one thing seems certain, the club will have to deal for an experienced quarterback and pick up at least two running backs in the National Football League draft next month.

With Brodie in retirement, the club is left with Steve Spurrier, a seven-year veteran who hasn't impressed the 49ers, and young Joe Reed, who probably is a couple of years away from being a dependable regular.

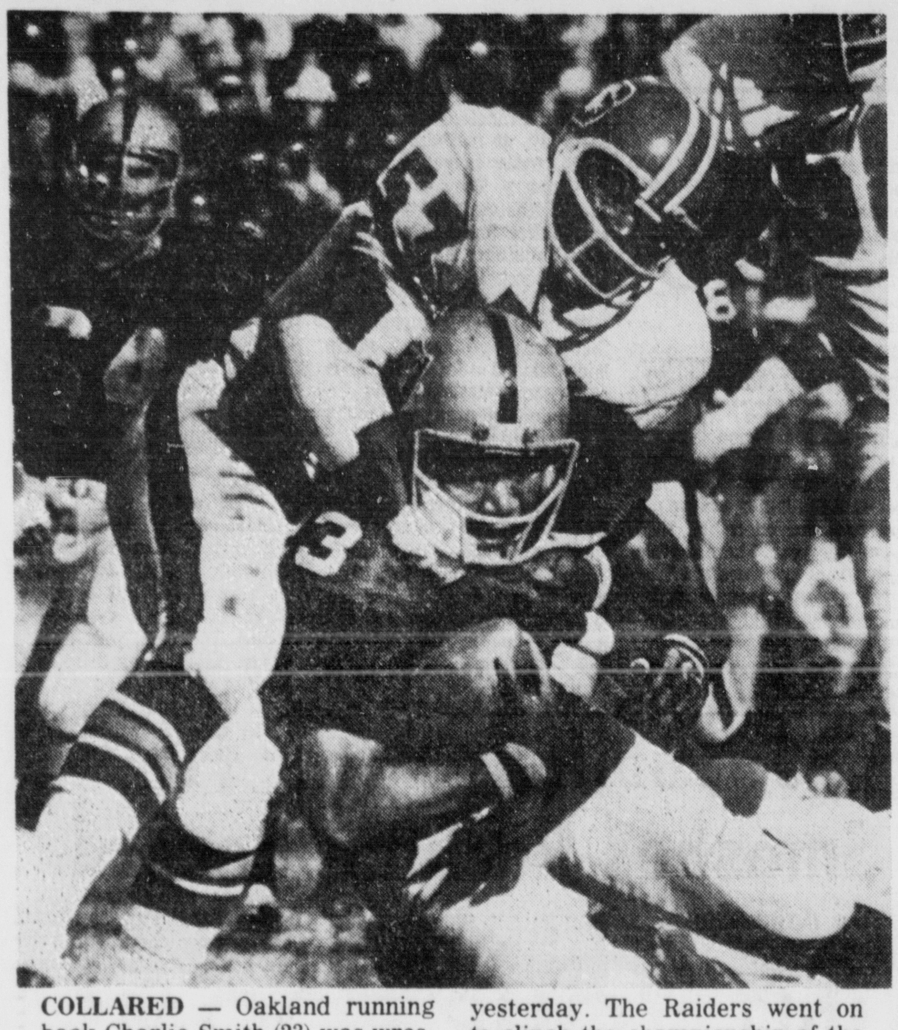
Jim Plunkett, Joe Namath and Dan Pastorini are experienced quarterbacks believed to be avilable in the trading marts and the 49ers, while not admitting as much publicly, would like to have any of the three if a trade can be worked out.

With the two first round draft choices San Francisco is in position to do some trading and failing that, pick up at least one star running back and quarterback in the first round of the draft.

"We are going to have to do a lot of studying in the next month," said one 49ers official. "It's obvious what our weaknesses are, but it might not be all that easy to plug them."

Brodie left early in the second quarter of Saturday's season-ending loss to Pittsburgh with a sore throwing arm, and thus went into retirement as only one of four quarterbacks in history to pass for more than 31,000. Officially over 17 years, he completed 2,463 passes in 4,479 attempts for 31,548 yards and a 55 per cent completion average.

On the San Francisco side, Mel Phillips came out of Saturday's game with a broken arm and Jimmy Thomas dislocated a shoulder. Safety Phillips got good news before the game, that he was the winner of the 49ers' annual Len Eshmont Award for inspirational leadership.



COLLARED — Oakland running back Charlie Smith (23) was wrestled to the Oakland Coliseum ground by Denver linebacker Tom Jackson (57) following a two-yard gain in the first period yesterday. The Raiders went on to clinch the championship of the American Football Conference's West division with a 21-17 victory over the visiting Broncos.

More than 20,000 no-shows were reported at Miami, Chicago and Atlanta this weekend. An estimated 20,000 stayed away from the Minnesota-New York Giants game at New Haven, Conn.

The spokesman said the no-show figure for the season represented 10 per cent of all season tickets sold.

Basketball Score: Tennessee, 11-6

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

UCLA beat North Carolina State Saturday, 84-66, but the really BIG news in college basketball was made at Knoxville, Tenn.

For UCLA, you see, always wins. What happened at Knoxville doesn't happen very often, and it was so unusual that even Dr. Edward J. Boling, the president of the University of Tennessee, got himself involved.

In fact, Boling became the central character in a unique post-game happening when he asked Tennessee Coach Ray Mears to put his players through an intra-squad scrimmage immediately after they had finished winning the Volunteer Classic tournament.

The reason Boling felt the scrimmage was necessary was because of the 11,700 fans in the stands. He thought they deserved some action for their money, and they got none during the title game in which Tennessee defeated Temple 11-6.

Temple, apparently trying to disprove the theory that the idea of the game is to score, held the ball for 11 ½ minutes in the first half and 14 minutes more in the second half in a slowdown attempt that failed to produce a victory but did result in one of the lowest-scoring basketball games ever played.

Ray Mears, the Volunteers coach, said the Temple stall "stressed once again the need of a 30-second clock in college basketball," and insisted "there was nothing we could do about it," but losing Coach Don Casey couldn't have disagreed more.

"We felt we couldn't let them set the tempo of the game," Casey said. "It was as much their responsibility to counter us as for us to counter them. They didn't even try to stop us from holding the ball."

Casey also said he wasn't too pleased with the officiating setup since three of the four officials at the tournament were from Nashville and he made it clear he didn't like the way they were calling fouls.

Someone suggested to the first-year Temple coach that his team's stall didn't do much to help college basketball in general or the Tennessee tournament in particular, and he tartly pointed out, "It's their classic, not mine."

The Owls went into the stall trailing 7-5 after 7 ½ minutes of the first half. They held the ball almost the rest of the half but couldn't score when Kevin Washington dribbled out of bounds with 15 seconds left in the half, and scored only one point in the second half.

Indiana (No. 3) whipped Ball State 87-62, North Carolina (4) had no trouble with East Tennessee State 81-63, Marquette (6) survived a mini-stall by Minnesota to win 68-50, Providence (8) got 52 points from Marvin Barnes to beat Austin Peay 94-92 (Fly Williams scored 40 for Austin Peay), Memphis State (9) routed East Texas State 99-76 and Louisville (10) beat Florida State 90-78. Maryland (5) and Notre Dame (7) were idle.

All-Stars Triumph In Charity Grid

The third annual Marin County Charity Bowl football game yesterday afternoon produced a 26-12 victory for the Marin All-Stars and close to $1,000 for charity, a spokesman said this morning.

Tim Harr scored on runs of 30 and eight yards and took a 65-yard touchdown pass from Mike Sanderson as the All-Stars defeated the Kentfield Firemen. Both teams consisted of former high school and college stars from Marin.

Approximately 500 fans attended on a clear day at College of Marin. Proceeds were to go to the Kentfield Medical Center for Handicapped Children.

Pete Carroll of the firemen threw touchdown passes of 40 and nine yards to Leon Howard. Carroll and Howard also had fine days on defense, each intercepting passes deep in Firemen territory.

The All-Stars built a 13-6 halftime lead on Harr's 30-yard run and a one-yard run by Jim Finnegan.

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (UPI) — The $50,000 Virginia Slims of Mission Viejo women's professional tennis tournament will be held Jan. 21-27, it was announced today. Heading the cast for the seven-day event is Billie Jean King, America's No. 1 women's player.

Redwood Wins; Marin 'Cats Are Defeated

Redwood High School, confronted with a tougher opponent than expected, outlasted Mira Loma of Sacramento in double overtime Saturday night to win the championship of the Yuba City basketball tournament, 62-57.

In other tournament action Saturday night, Marin Catholic lost to Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa, 79-65, in a game for the consolation championship of the Rose City tournament in Santa Rosa.

Redwood (5-3) coach Dick Hart felt Livermore would provide the Giants' toughest opposition, but Redwood easily won the semi-final game, 91-65, only to run into trouble in the finals.

All-tournament selection Neil Hennessy made the second half of a two-shot foul with five seconds left in the first overtime to deadlock the game again, then opened the decisive second overtime with a field goal and free throw. John Troppman and John Hoffmire added other field goals later.

Hennessy scored 23 points, giving him 72 for the three games. Troppmann and Darrell Elder (with 19 points Saturday) also made all-tournament. Redwood won the event for the third time in seven years — with three runnerup finishes and one consolation title to show for the other four trips.

Marin Catholic (3-4) could not cope with Cardinal Newman's 6-foot-5, 210-pound Gerald Robinson, a football tight end, who scored 32 points and grabbed 19 rebounds.

The Wildcats trailed most of the way by six or eight points, with the margin expanding at the end as they fouled and Newman sank free throws, 19 of 24 altogether.

Terry Ahern scored 19 points and made the all-tournament team. Sophomore Gary Johnson led with 19 and Mike Mahoney had 12 for the 'Cats. Riordan of San Francisco won the tournament.

Kansas Favored In Liberty

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Kansas quarterback David Jaynes is expected to light the fireworks against underdog North Carolina State in tonight's nationally-televised Liberty Bowl before a near-capacity crowd of 50,000.

Kansas (7-3-1) is a slight favorite on the strength of All-America Jaynes' passing arm. North Carolina State, which wound up with an 8-3 record and the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, will rely on a strong running game and a tough pass defense. Game time is 6:00 PST.

Jaynes is a ready-made pro passer at 6-2 and 212-pounds and is expected to go in the first round of the draft when he graduates this year. He threw for 2,131 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Kansas coach Don Fambrough and North Carolina State's Lou Holtz both agree that the outcome will swing heavily on how well Jaynes' throws the football.

State, which will be trying to atone for an 84-66 drubbing of its basketball team at the hands of UCLA Saturday, will use Willie Burden and three other running backs tabbed "the four stallions" for ball control against the big Kansas defense. The others are Charley Young, Stan Fritts and Ronald Hooks.

Burden ran for 1,014 yards and the ACC rushing title this year.

Kansas tied for second in the rugged Big Eight Conference and upset Missouri, 14-13, in the closing game. The Jayhawks played a tougher schedule than N.C. State although the Wolfpack almost came out on top against unbeaten Penn State before bowing 35-29.

It will be the fifth bowl appearance for N.C. State and the Wolfpack's third Liberty trip. State defeated Georgia, 14-7, here in 1967 and lost to Mississippi State, 16-12, in 1963.

Kansas is 1-2 in bowl competition and it will be the first Liberty visit for the Jayhawks.

O.J.'s Finest Moment After Game

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

New York (UPI) — O.J. Simpson's finest moment came after he left the field, not while he still was on it.

To my way of thinking anyway.

He had just reached the Promised Land. He had only a few minutes before accomplished what no other individual in professional football history had by rolling up 2,003 yards rushing in a single season breaking Jim Brown's 10-year-old record of 1,863 yards.

Buffalo's unbelievably gifted running back had done it the hard way, too, on a hard, unyielding, bone-punishing, snow-frosted field in damp, miserable weather.

The Bills had numbed the New York Jets, 34-14, in a National Football League game that marked Weeb Ewbank's farewell to coaching and possibly could have been Joe Namath's last one also—"I honestly don't know" —but in light of O.J. Simpson's superlative performance, everything else took second place.

He carried the ball 34 times for 200 yards at Shea Stadium Sunday, becoming the first player in pro ball ever to accumulate 200 yards three different times in a single season as well as the first man ever to crack the 2,000-yard barrier.

Now, it was after the game, and naturally everybody wanted him.

When it comes to obliging people, O. J. Simpson could've given Dale Carnegie lessons. O.J. doesn't forget anyone. He makes sure everybody is taken care of, but EVERYBODY.

Sure, he'd be happy to go on television and talk to the radio men and the press also but he had to take care of one little detail first.

He had to make sure the rest of the Bills' first-line offensive unit came with him. All of them. Nor would he leave this to chance. One by one, he sought them out and persuaded them to come with him. This was no hot-shot buttering up the men who blocked for him. This was, instead, an individual who genuinely intended for 11 others to share the limelight with him.

"C'mon, fellas," O.J. called to them, smiling, as he entered the room specially set aside for the more than 150 members of the media eager to question him.

The media people began firing questions at him, but he interrupted to say:

"Before I do anything else, I want to introduce our entire offensive line. They're the ones who did it for me and they should get the same credit."

"He's a rookie, and did he do a job!" Simpson said.

He had something to say about each of them and they all ate it up. What made the whole thing so impressive, is that O.J. did it so naturally and you could tell he really enjoyed sharing his success.

Later on, someone started a question to him by saying, "you are now the greatest football player ever..."

"Running back..." Simpson corrected gently.

In the glare of the TV lights, a small cut on the bridge of O.J.'s nose trickled blood. His right thumb also was bleeding and his right eye was slightly bloodshot.

"I got tagged a few times," he said, smiling, when asked about the eye. "Phil Wise (the Jets' right safety) got me with a forearm, but it wasn't his fault, I wear only two bars on the front of my helmet."

"You and Phil had words, didn't you?" some asked.

"No," said Simpson. "It was friendly talk. He came flying up a couple of times and caught me. I told him 'good play,' and he said, 'you're a good runner.' He's an excellent player. The eye is nothing. He didn't mean it."

Over in the Jets' quarters, Phil Wise said:

"Man, if I touched his eye with my finger or forearm it was the only thing I touched on him all day. He just used me up. You know how a streetcar conductor punches your ticket. He just punched my ticket and waved to me in the end zone.

"He lets you stay with him awhile, then he cuts and he's gone. He's like a flim-flam man."

The Bills had numbed the New York Jets, 34-14, in a National Football League game that marked Weeb Ewbank's farewell to coaching and possibly could have been Joe Namath's last one also—"I honestly don't know" —but in light of O.J. Simpson's superlative performance, everything else took second place.

He carried the ball 34 times for 200 yards at Shea Stadium Sunday, becoming the first player in pro ball ever to accumulate 200 yards three different times in a single season as well as the first man ever to crack the 2,000-yard barrier.

Now, it was after the game, and naturally everybody wanted him.

Television first, naturally.

When it comes to obliging people, O. J. Simpson could've given Dale Carnegie lessons. O.J. doesn't forget anyone. He makes sure everybody is taken care of, but EVERYBODY.

Sure, he'd be happy to go on television and talk to the radio men and the press also but he had to take care of one little detail first.

He had to make sure the rest of the Bills' first-line offensive unit came with him. All of them. Nor would he leave this to chance. One by one, he sought them out and persuaded them to come with him. This was no hot-shot buttering up the men who blocked for him. This was, instead, an individual who genuinely intended for 11 others to share the limelight with him.

"C'mon, fellas," O.J. called to them, smiling, as he entered the room specially set aside for the more than 150 members of the media eager to question him.

The offensive unit came with him.

O.J. didn't merely have them take a bow and then forget them either.

The media people began firing questions at him, but he interrupted to say:

"Before I do anything else, I want to introduce our entire offensive line. They're the ones who did it for me and they should get the same credit."

"He's a rookie, and did he do a job!" Simpson said.

He had something to say about each of them and they all ate it up. What made the whole thing so impressive, is that O.J. did it so naturally and you could tell he really enjoyed sharing his success.

Later on, someone started a question to him by saying, "you are now the greatest football player ever..."

"Running back..." Simpson corrected gently.

"I got tagged a few times," he said, smiling, when asked about the eye. "Phil Wise (the Jets' right safety) got me with a forearm, but it wasn't his fault, I wear only two bars on the front of my helmet."

"You and Phil had words, didn't you?" some asked.

"No," said Simpson. "It was friendly talk. He came flying up a couple of times and caught me. I told him 'good play,' and he said, 'you're a good runner.' He's an excellent player. The eye is nothing. He didn't mean it."

Over in the Jets' quarters, Phil Wise said:

"Man, if I touched his eye with my finger or forearm it was the only thing I touched on him all day. He just used me up. You know how a streetcar conductor punches your ticket. He just punched my ticket and waved to me in the end zone.

"He lets you stay with him awhile, then he cuts and he's gone. He's like a flim-flam man."

SMU President Supports Coach

DALLAS (UPI) — Southern Methodist University President Dr. Paul Hardin said today he has complete confidence in football coach Dave Smith who in turn apologized last night for being connected with possible illegal payoffs.

"There is no plan to dismiss anyone," Hardin said shortly after his return from a Hawaiian vacation.

"I want to emphasize the confidence I have in coach Dave Smith and the members of his staff as men of ability and integrity," Hardin said in a statement. "Their job is to look forward, not backward, and to work positively toward a successful and competitive season in 1974, with our full backing and confidence."

One week ago, Hardin told Southwest Conference officials his school was involved in alleged rule violations that included reports of incentive payments to members of the football squad's specialty teams and cash exceeding the face value for football players' game tickets.

Some members of the 1973 Mustang team have claimed members of the punting teams, kickoff teams and other specialty teams received as much as $20 for causing or recovering fumbles, blocking kicks or other big plays.

"The rewards were in cash and were paid to the players by a coach, not immediately after the game but later on," Mike Jones, a sports reporter for the Dallas Morning News quoted one SMU football player as saying.

"I have made a mistake and I am certainly sorry," Smith said. "I never intended to have anything about our program be wrong or reflect anything wrong on SMU. Dr. Hardin and I are working through the conference officials to make necessary corrections. We are wrong by the letter of the law and for that I am sorry."

Smith said he had been contacted last week about head coaching positions at the University of New Mexico and Winnipeg in the professional Canadian Football League. Smith said he met with the team last night to assure players he was going to remain at SMU.

"I found our players very receptive," Smith said. "They were very puzzled about the future, but we are all staying positive and I would hope this will make our relationships even stronger."

Smith was hired only last year to replace Hayden Fry. Smith was head coach at Oklahoma State when hired but had been an assistant under Fry at SMU.

Bullets Throttle Warriors

OAKLAND (UPI) — Forward Mike Riordan scored a season-high 33 points and powered the capital Bullets to a 106-93 national basketball association victory over the Golden State Warriors Saturday night.

The victory boosted the Bullets' record to 15-12 and increased their central division lead to three games over the Atlanta Hawks. The Warriors' Pacific Division lead was chopped to half a game over Los Angeles.

It was a close game for three quarters, with the Bullets taking the lead for keeps 76-75 on Rookie Nick Westherspoon's jump shot with 44 seconds left in the third period.

Most of the damage, however, was done by Riordan who made 16 of 21 field goal attempts, including several long jump shots.

Rick Barry paced the warriors with 32 points and Nate Thurmond grabbed 14 rebounds. Riordan also did a fine defensive job on Cazzie Russell, who scored 86 points in his last two games but only managed four against the Bullets.

Louisiana Tech Takes Small College Crown

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Louisiana Tech's Bulldogs are the National Collegiate Athletic Association small college football champions after turning in an awesome defensive effort in a surprisingly easy victory in the Camellia Bowl.

The Bulldogs limited the high-geared Western Kentucky offense to 76 yards Saturday in routing the Hilltoppers 34-0 for the first-ever NCAA College Division II title.

It was the first loss of the season for the Kentuckians, who had averaged 37 points a game this season prior to the Camellia Bowl. The win over the slightly favored Hilltoppers was Tech's 12th in a row since a season-opening loss.

Spearheading the Bulldogs' big defensive effort was cornerback Wenford Wilborn, who set up two first half touchdowns with a pass interception and a 40-yard punt return.

Pope added a 31-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and Tech closed out the scoring on a 28-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Steven Haynes to flanker Pat Tilley.

A Busy Week In Prep Basketball

The week before Christmas, traditionally a time of bustling activity, will feature 18 non-league high school basketball games involving the eight Marin County Athletic League teams.

All will be played against regularly-scheduled opponents, except for Drake's three games in the McClymonds Christmas Tournament at Cal State Hayward Thursday through Saturday. It will be the third tourney in three weeks for the Pirates.

Basketball Tops Sked In Sonoma

Tomorrow night, though, there will be a full slate of basketball contests with the local high schools getting some last-minute, non-league competition before the loop wars begin in January.

Petaluma, Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park and Casa Grande of Petaluma will all be traveling south to Marin County tomorrow to meet, respectively, Novato, Marin Catholic and San Marin in evening games. Rancho's game starts at 8 p.m., while the other two begin at 7 p.m.

The other two local schools will be staying at home tomorrow, with St. Vincent of Petaluma hosting California School for the Deaf of Berkeley at Kenilworth Junior High School in Petaluma and Tomales entertaining El Molino of Forestville. Both games start at 7 p.m.

Sonoma State College, meanwhile, will travel again this week with an appearance at the Grand Canyon Invitational Basketball Tournament in Phoenix, Ariz. The four-team tourney will be held Thursday and Friday nights.

Tomorrow's seven-game schedule finds Oceana of Pacifica at Tamalpais, 3:15 p.m.; Lincoln of San Francisco at Redwood, 4 p.m.; Casa Grande of Petaluma at San Marin, 7 p.m.; Petaluma at Novato, 7 p.m.; Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa at San Rafael, 7:30 p.m.; Terra Linda at Piner of Santa Rosa, 7:30 p.m.; and Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park at Marin Catholic, 8 p.m.

Wednesday's lone game sends Washington of San Francisco to Redwood, 4 p.m. On Thursday, Novato will play the College of Marin junior varsity at 6 p.m. as a prelude to the Tars' game with San Jose City College at 8 p.m.

On Friday, the schedule calls for Casa Grande at Marin Catholic, Concord at Terra Linda, San Marin at Piner and the San Rafael alumni game, all at 8 p.m. Tamalpais will visit Riordan of San Francisco at 8 p.m. Saturday.

No Place Like Home For Sonoma

The Sonoma State College basketball team is now safely ensconced in Rohnert Park after learning the intrinsic truth of the old homily: "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

Saturday night, the Cossacks' disastrous six-day road trip came to a crushing conclusion in Murray, Ky. with a 102-68 loss to Murray State University.

The loss to Murray State was the fifth straight on the road for Sonoma, now 2-5, which bowed to Southwest Missouri State University and Middle Tennessee State University earlier on the tour.

Unfortunately for the Cossacks, though, their home respite will be short as they take to the road again Wednesday to participate in the Grand Canyon Invitational in Phoenix, Arizona, Thursday and Friday nights.

Against Murray, Sonoma was in the game for one half, taking a 45-39 deficit to the locker room at halftime. The Cossacks scored the first basket of the second half, but Murray then reeled off 12 straight points to destroy Sonoma's comeback hopes.

Bill Belander and Steve Tiedeman again led the Cossacks, with Belander bucketing 18 points and Tiedeman adding 13.

SMU President Supports Coach

DALLAS (UPI) — Southern Methodist University President Dr. Paul Hardin said today he has complete confidence in football coach Dave Smith who in turn apologized last night for being connected with possible illegal payoffs.

"There is no plan to dismiss anyone," Hardin said shortly after his return from a Hawaiian vacation.

"I want to emphasize the confidence I have in coach Dave Smith and the members of his staff as men of ability and integrity," Hardin said in a statement. "Their job is to look forward, not backward, and to work positively toward a successful and competitive season in 1974, with our full backing and confidence."

One week ago, Hardin told Southwest Conference officials his school was involved in alleged rule violations that included reports of incentive payments to members of the football squad's specialty teams and cash exceeding the face value for football players' game tickets.

The infractions are serious enough that, if proven, could put SMU on probation.

Some members of the 1973 Mustang team have claimed members of the punting teams, kickoff teams and other specialty teams received as much as $20 for causing or recovering fumbles, blocking kicks or other big plays.

"The rewards were in cash and were paid to the players by a coach, not immediately after the game but later on," Mike Jones, a sports reporter for the Dallas Morning News quoted one SMU football player as saying.

"I have made a mistake and I am certainly sorry," Smith said. "I never intended to have anything about our program be wrong or reflect anything wrong on SMU. Dr. Hardin and I are working through the conference officials to make necessary corrections. We are wrong by the letter of the law and for that I am sorry."

Smith said he had been contacted last week about head coaching positions at the University of New Mexico and Winnipeg in the professional Canadian Football League. Smith said he met with the team last night to assure players he was going to remain at SMU.

"I found our players very receptive," Smith said. "They were very puzzled about the future, but we are all staying positive and I would hope this will make our relationships even stronger."

Smith was hired only last year to replace Hayden Fry. Smith was head coach at Oklahoma State when hired but had been an assistant under Fry at SMU.

Bullets Throttle Warriors

OAKLAND (UPI) — Forward Mike Riordan scored a season-high 33 points and powered the capital Bullets to a 106-93 national basketball association victory over the Golden State Warriors Saturday night.

The victory boosted the Bullets' record to 15-12 and increased their central division lead to three games over the Atlanta Hawks. The Warriors' Pacific Division lead was chopped to half a game over Los Angeles.

It was a close game for three quarters, with the Bullets taking the lead for keeps 76-75 on Rookie Nick Westherspoon's jump shot with 44 seconds left in the third period.

Most of the damage, however, was done by Riordan who made 16 of 21 field goal attempts, including several long jump shots.

Rick Barry paced the warriors with 32 points and Nate Thurmond grabbed 14 rebounds. Riordan also did a fine defensive job on Cazzie Russell, who scored 86 points in his last two games but only managed four against the Bullets.

Louisiana Tech Takes Small College Crown

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Louisiana Tech's Bulldogs are the National Collegiate Athletic Association small college football champions after turning in an awesome defensive effort in a surprisingly easy victory in the Camellia Bowl.

The Bulldogs limited the high-geared Western Kentucky offense to 76 yards Saturday in routing the Hilltoppers 34-0 for the first-ever NCAA College Division II title.

It was the first loss of the season for the Kentuckians, who had averaged 37 points a game this season prior to the Camellia Bowl. The win over the slightly favored Hilltoppers was Tech's 12th in a row since a season-opening loss.

Spearheading the Bulldogs' big defensive effort was cornerback Wenford Wilborn, who set up two first half touchdowns with a pass interception and a 40-yard punt return.

A 24-point explosion by Tech in the late first period and early second quarter decided the nationally televised contest.

The points came on a Jerry Pope 33-yard field goal, a one-yard touchdown plunge by Charles McDaniel, an 11-yard TD romp by linebacker Danny Curtis with an intercepted pass, and a 36-yard scoring pass from quarterback Denny Duron to split end Roger Carr.

Pope added a 31-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and Tech closed out the scoring on a 28-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Steven Haynes to flanker Pat Tilley.

The week before Christmas, traditionally a time of bustling activity, will feature 18 non-league high school basketball games involving the eight Marin County Athletic League teams.

The other two local schools will be staying at home tomorrow, with St. Vincent of Petaluma hosting California School for the Deaf of Berkeley at Kenilworth Junior High School in Petaluma and Tomales entertaining El Molino of Forestville. Both games start at 7 p.m.

Sonoma State College, meanwhile, will travel again this week with an appearance at the Grand Canyon Invitational Basketball Tournament in Phoenix, Ariz. The four-team tourney will be held Thursday and Friday nights.

No Place Like Home For Sonoma

The Sonoma State College basketball team is now safely ensconced in Rohnert Park after learning the intrinsic truth of the old homily: "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

Saturday night, the Cossacks' disastrous six-day road trip came to a crushing conclusion in Murray, Ky. with a 102-68 loss to Murray State University.

The loss to Murray State was the fifth straight on the road for Sonoma, now 2-5, which bowed to Southwest Missouri State University and Middle Tennessee State University earlier on the tour.

Unfortunately for the Cossacks, though, their home respite will be short as they take to the road again Wednesday to participate in the Grand Canyon Invitational in Phoenix, Arizona, Thursday and Friday nights.

Against Murray, Sonoma was in the game for one half, taking a 45-39 deficit to the locker room at halftime. The Cossacks scored the first basket of the second half, but Murray then reeled off 12 straight points to destroy Sonoma's comeback hopes.

Bill Belander and Steve Tiedeman again led the Cossacks, with Belander bucketing 18 points and Tiedeman adding 13.

White Motors Shifts Gears

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. What are my chances of getting a dividend from my White Motors (NYSE) shares in my lifetime? — S.P.

A. This manufacturer of trucks and farm equipment has been successful in turning operations around from the large deficit reported in 1970. Last year net reached 79 cents a share and this year $1.80 a share appears attainable. Preferred dividends, which were $798,000 in arrears, were cleared in November of 1972. As of the end of 1972, the company had $9.9 million in retained earnings available for cash dividends.

In 1970, when dividends were suspended on the common, current assets to current liabilities had fallen to a 1.4 to 1 ratio; by the end of 1972, the proportion had improved to 2.3 to 1. All short-term debt was eliminated in 1972 from funds raised by the sale of common stock and private placement of $55 million in senior notes. Thus, with both operating results and financial condition improving, the likelihood of your receiving a cash dividend on these shares within a reasonable period seems excellent.

Q. In January of last year I purchased 500 shares of Punta Gorda Isles (ASE) at 22½ What action do you feel would be appropriate regarding these shares at this time? — G.W.

A. Despite the enormity of the paper loss these shares represent to you, I would counsel patience in this case. First and foremost the land development industry is under a cloud from the change in accounting methods which has been imposed by the American Institute of CPAs. Now the entire market has witnessed a major break as investors panicked in response to the uncertainties of the energy crisis. Earnings, which were up 32 per cent year to year in the first nine months of 1973, could reach $1.25 for the full year. Company land holdings of 90,000 acres extend over seven counties in Florida. While no major near-term turnaround is foreseen for these shares, I see no justification for selling at these distressed levels.

Firestone Earns Over $3 Billion

Sales of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, exceeded the $3 billion level for the first time in company history in the fiscal year ended Oct. 31. Net earnings also rose to a new record.

Earnings for the 12 months totaled $164,861,000, an increase of 21.4 per cent over last year's $135,773,000, the previous record.

Net earnings in the final quarter of the year climbed 15.1 per cent to $51,424,000, or $0.90 per share, compared with last year's $44,688,000, or $0.78 per share.

Early Prices Higher On Stock Mart

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices edged higher in fairly active trading today on the New York Stock Exchange as a winter storm caused a one-hour delay in the opening.

With uncertainty running high over the Middle East situation, oil stocks with little or no dependence on resumption of Arab oil shipments gained on the Big Board. Ohio Standard added 1 ½ and Getty 1 ¼.

In the mixed glamor group, Polaroid rose 1 ⅜, Avon Products 1 ⅛, while IBM dropped 2 and Bausch & Lomb a point.

Dupont was ahead a point, while Eastman Kodak dipped ⅞ among blue-chip chemical issues. TWA, ahead a point, paced the irregular airlines and aircrafts.

Steels, motors, rails and papers also moved both ways in fractions.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL, C.P.A.

Expecting A State Tax Refund? Don't Procrastinate In Mailing

If you are going to have a refund from the State of California, it behooves you to get your tax return in as soon as possible in order to get your refund as soon as possible.

If your wages will be about the same in 1974 as in 1973, you might as well file your return and have the refund mailed direct to you. If your 1974 income is going to be higher than 1973 by a wide margin or if you are going to have income in 1974 that is not subject to withholding, it would be a good idea to have the refund applied to your 1974 taxes.

If you underestimated the amount of federal income tax that you are going to owe at the end of the year, it is possible that you will be hit with a substantial penalty for failure to adequately estimate your taxes.

You must have at least 80 per cent of the total tax that will be due paid in on your estimate or by withholding. Otherwise, an underpayment could be assessed and a bill sent to you immediately after your Form 1040 has been processed next April. This applies only if your estimate was less than your 1972 tax or otherwise does not qualify for the exemption from underestimating penalties.

If you are going to be short and are faced with a penalty and you are employed, you can avoid this penalty by the simple expedient of making an agreement with your employer to have him withhold an additional amount of tax from your wages this year.

That is because the amount withheld from your wages is considered to have been paid in equal quarterly installments in making the computation. So if you are going to be short, have your employer take it out of your December pay and this will get you in good shape for next year's tax return.

Fuel Lack Hits Landscape Jobs

Landscape projects throughout California are being hampered by the current energy crisis, according to the California Landscape Contractors Association.

CLCA president Walter A. Bray, Sacramento, said landscaping projects on freeways, industrial sites and residences is being affected by fuel shortages and shortages of materials used in the industry which are by-products of oil.

"Our trucks and tractors are being stalled all over the state," Bray said, "for lack of gasoline and diesel fuel." Bray added the landscape contractors' suppliers are unable to deliver materials needed by contractors due to fuel shortages and dwindling supplies of materials such as plastic pipe and sprinkler heads for irrigation systems.

A Number Of Stores Open Up In New Rancho Cotate Center

McKenney

Cole

The new Rancho Cotate Shopping Center on East Cotati Avenue at La Salle Avenue in Cotati is coming alive with the opening of several new stores including the large Farmers Market.

The 25,000-square-foot market, which opened last week, brings to 35 the number of Farmers Markets operated in Northern California by Fong Enterprises of Sacramento.

Codding Enterprises, developer of the 7.5-acre shopping center, announced that several other businesses will be opening at the center, including a new outlet of Crystal Cleaners, headquartered in Terra Linda.

W. J. Murray, who operates Crystal Cleaners at 621 Del Ganado Road in Terra Linda, said his Cotati shop will open the first of next year. Murray bought Terra Linda Cleaners at 669 Del Ganado Road last April, and opened Northgate Crystal Cleaners last June at 4280 Redwood Highway. His new Crystal Cleaners at Rancho Cotate will be his fourth outlet.

Other businesses in operation at Rancho Cotate Center are Rosie's Cantina Mexican restaurant, which opened this week; Eeyore book store; a variety store called Bonanza 88; a delicatessen; The Tennis Racquet sports apparel shop; a plant and gift shop called Garden Of Earthly Delights; and a gift shop called Things.

Other businesses expected to open by Christmas are a Round Table Pizza house by Phil Miller of Santa Rosa; Western Auto; The Rustic sandwich shop; and Cougar's Den barber shop. Also planned at the center are Rancho Cotate Speed Wash; a theater; and a branch of Crocker Bank.

Richard B. Codding, vice president of Codding Enterprises, said the shopping center still has space available for lease.

JAMES H. McKENNEY of Corte Madera was appointed assistant manager at Security Pacific Bank's San Rafael branch. McKenney was formerly administrative assistant with the San Rafael branch.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. What are my chances of getting a dividend from my White Motors (NYSE) shares in my lifetime? — S.P.

A. This manufacturer of trucks and farm equipment has been successful in turning operations around from the large deficit reported in 1970. Last year net reached 79 cents a share and this year $1.80 a share appears attainable. Preferred dividends, which were $798,000 in arrears, were cleared in November of 1972. As of the end of 1972, the company had $9.9 million in retained earnings available for cash dividends.

In 1970, when dividends were suspended on the common, current assets to current liabilities had fallen to a 1.4 to 1 ratio; by the end of 1972, the proportion had improved to 2.3 to 1. All short-term debt was eliminated in 1972 from funds raised by the sale of common stock and private placement of $55 million in senior notes. Thus, with both operating results and financial condition improving, the likelihood of your receiving a cash dividend on these shares within a reasonable period seems excellent.

Q. In January of last year I purchased 500 shares of Punta Gorda Isles (ASE) at 22½ What action do you feel would be appropriate regarding these shares at this time? — G.W.

A. Despite the enormity of the paper loss these shares represent to you, I would counsel patience in this case. First and foremost the land development industry is under a cloud from the change in accounting methods which has been imposed by the American Institute of CPAs. Now the entire market has witnessed a major break as investors panicked in response to the uncertainties of the energy crisis. Earnings, which were up 32 per cent year to year in the first nine months of 1973, could reach $1.25 for the full year. Company land holdings of 90,000 acres extend over seven counties in Florida. While no major near-term turnaround is foreseen for these shares, I see no justification for selling at these distressed levels.

Early Prices Higher On Stock Mart

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices edged higher in fairly active trading today on the New York Stock Exchange as a winter storm caused a one-hour delay in the opening.

With uncertainty running high over the Middle East situation, oil stocks with little or no dependence on resumption of Arab oil shipments gained on the Big Board. Ohio Standard added 1 ½ and Getty 1 ¼.

Most other oils fell in fractions.

In the mixed glamor group, Polaroid rose 1 ⅜, Avon Products 1 ⅛, while IBM dropped 2 and Bausch & Lomb a point.

Dupont was ahead a point, while Eastman Kodak dipped ⅞ among blue-chip chemical issues. TWA, ahead a point, paced the irregular airlines and aircrafts.

Steels, motors, rails and papers also moved both ways in fractions.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL, C.P.A.

Expecting A State Tax Refund? Don't Procrastinate In Mailing

If you are going to have a refund from the State of California, it behooves you to get your tax return in as soon as possible in order to get your refund as soon as possible.

If your wages will be about the same in 1974 as in 1973, you might as well file your return and have the refund mailed direct to you. If your 1974 income is going to be higher than 1973 by a wide margin or if you are going to have income in 1974 that is not subject to withholding, it would be a good idea to have the refund applied to your 1974 taxes.

If you underestimated the amount of federal income tax that you are going to owe at the end of the year, it is possible that you will be hit with a substantial penalty for failure to adequately estimate your taxes.

You must have at least 80 per cent of the total tax that will be due paid in on your estimate or by withholding. Otherwise, an underpayment could be assessed and a bill sent to you immediately after your Form 1040 has been processed next April. This applies only if your estimate was less than your 1972 tax or otherwise does not qualify for the exemption from underestimating penalties.

If you are going to be short and are faced with a penalty and you are employed, you can avoid this penalty by the simple expedient of making an agreement with your employer to have him withhold an additional amount of tax from your wages this year.

That is because the amount withheld from your wages is considered to have been paid in equal quarterly installments in making the computation. So if you are going to be short, have your employer take it out of your December pay and this will get you in good shape for next year's tax return.

Fuel Lack Hits Landscape Jobs

Landscape projects throughout California are being hampered by the current energy crisis, according to the California Landscape Contractors Association.

CLCA president Walter A. Bray, Sacramento, said landscaping projects on freeways, industrial sites and residences is being affected by fuel shortages and shortages of materials used in the industry which are by-products of oil.

"Our trucks and tractors are being stalled all over the state," Bray said, "for lack of gasoline and diesel fuel." Bray added the landscape contractors' suppliers are unable to deliver materials needed by contractors due to fuel shortages and dwindling supplies of materials such as plastic pipe and sprinkler heads for irrigation systems.

Tea Party Reenacted In Boston

BOSTON (AP) — The 200th anniversary celebration of the Boston Tea Party probably won't live in memory as long as the original, but it won't soon be forgotten.

This time, there were four demonstrations, no tea and real Indians.

The first demonstration was official — a re-enactment of tea chests being tossed overboard from a ship. The chests were empty, however, to keep from increasing pollution in Boston Harbor.

Then, members of a group called the People's Bicentennial Commission climbed aboard the ship and unfurled a banner reading "Impeach Nixon." A member of the group, wearing a huge mask resembling President Nixon's face, circled the brig in a rowboat and waved his hands high in Nixon's familiar "V" style.

That group also tarred and feathered a dummy of Nixon and hanged him in effigy.

The noisiest demonstration came from the People's Bicentennial Commission, which held a town meeting in historic Faneuil Hall, and then marched several thousand strong to the waterfront.

Katherine Kane, who heads Boston 200, the official group heading up bicentennial events, said she was encouraged by the "fantastic response" from the citizenry. She hailed the diversity of opinions as exemplifying the spirit of the Revolution.

Steady Decline In Test Scores Has U.S. Educators Concerned

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 10-year trend of lower scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test has educators concerned that students' education is not equipping them with the abilities tested by the SAT, The New York Times reported yesterday.

The College Board prograams for the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J., reported that average scores this year for the SAT, taken by high school graduates, were 445 on the verbal portion and 481 on the mathematical part. Ten years ago, average scores were 478 for verbal and 502 for mathematics. The tests are scored on a scale of 200 to 800.

Authorities interviewed by The Times questioned the explanation of earlier years that average scores had fallen because youngsters who previously would not consider college were taking the tests.

An unidentified College Board official told the Times the number of students taking the SAT had leveled off at about one million several years ago.

"The official suggested that it might be time to start thinking about the possibility that elementary and secondary schools are not preparing students as well in verbal and mathematical skills as they did in former years," The Times said.

Sam McCandless, program service officer for the College Board's Admissions Testing Program, said " ... there seems no longer to be a general consensus about what it means to be 'well educated.' We're trying to find a way to do a study."
